Abstract—The authors examined the effects of a 12-week, 100% body weight (BW) resistance training program on the muscle strength, body composition, and metabolic profile of 10 sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control or an exercise group. The control group performed no exercise, whereas the exercise group performed a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks for muscle strength, body composition, and metabolic profile. The exercise group showed significant increases in muscle strength, body composition, and metabolic profile compared to the control group. The authors conclude that a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program is an effective means of improving muscle strength, body composition, and metabolic profile in sedentary, middle-aged men.
