Moffett, 2008-10-31 This was not meant to be a book When I was a child I knew there was something different about me but I didn't know what it was I knew it had to be a secret because if anyone found out about it I would be trouble I thought of it as different levels of myself I got into therapy to help my teenaged daughter Who knew I would get help too My therapist understood immediately when I told her that I had levels I was diagnosed with Multiple Personality Disorder now known as Dissociative Identity Disorder and learned they are called alters rather than levels There are four alters the Infant Center of the Universe was a tiny baby a Little Girl who was the keeper of the secrets andrew a preschooler who lives in the moment without thought of consequences and the Shadow I was terrified of the Shadow because I thought it wanted to kill me My therapist suggested I get a journal to work in while we dealt with this disorder After each session I thought hard about living with this disorder so I could convey it in a way my therapist could understand Working on the journal was difficult and painful at times but it became a journey to peace understanding and healing for me I never intended for anyone other than my therapist to see the journal The alters are integrated now and we are all working together I recently showed my journal to several doctors who were working with me and they all told me that I needed to publish the journal as a book They said it would be a great teaching tool because there is nothing like it available now So this book is that journal unedited and unaltered Dissociative Identity Disorder in a Nutshell Shirley J.

Association APA officially changed the term from MPD to DID to the present The historical review of this mental coping mechanism in the face of trauma began with the ancient Egyptians when some gods were composed of the essence of multiple creatures to form one god These ancient cultures set a foundation that western culture used to assist in the creation of the field of psychology The review continues into the late eighteen hundreds as Freud Charcot Janet and others not only diagnose a condition of hysteria but initiate treatment The review continued through the combat trauma war in the twentieth century in which post traumatic stress was found to lead to DID From the nineteen fifties to the nineteen nineties several well publicized cases of MPD were reviewed The final result is one document that provides therapists and lay persons alike with the history of dissociation and MPD that assists in their understanding of the condition Our Collective Life
