Fires on the Border Rosemary Hennessy, 2013-12-01 The history of the maquiladoras has been punctuated by workers organized resistance to abysmal working and living conditions Over years of involvement in such movements Rosemary Hennessy was struck by an elusive but significant feature of these struggles the extent to which organizing is driven by attachments of affection and antagonism belief betrayal and identification What precisely is the affective dimension of organizing for justice Are affects and emotions the same And how can their value be calculated Fires on the Border takes up these questions of labor and community organizing its affect culture on Mexico's northern border from the early 1970s to the present day Through these campaigns Hennessy illuminates the attachments and identifications that motivate people to act on behalf of one another and that bind them to a common cause The book's unsettling even jarring narratives bring together empirical and ethnographic accounts of specific campaigns the untold stories of gay and lesbian organizers love and utopian longing in concert with materialist theories of affect and the critical good sense of Mexican organizers Teasing out the integration of affect culture in economic relations and cultural processes Hennessy provides evidence that sexuality and gender as strong affect attractors are incorporated in the harvesting of surplus labor At the same time workers testimonies confirm that the capacities for bonding and affective attachment far from being entirely at the service of capital are at the very heart of social movements devoted to sustaining life

Contemporary Slavery Annie Bunting, Joel Quirk, 2018-05-15 This book looks at recent efforts to combat contemporary slavery worldwide and explores how the history and iconography of slavery has been invoked to support a series of government interventions activist projects legal instruments and rhetorical performances

Seeing Nature Through Gender Virginia Scharff, 2003 Environmental history has traditionally told the story of Man and Nature Scholars have too frequently overlooked the ways in which their predominantly male subjects have themselves been shaped by gender Seeing Nature through Gender here reintroduces gender as a meaningful category of analysis for environmental history showing how women's actions desires and choices have shaped the world and seeing men as gendered actors as well In thirteen essays that show how gendered ideas have shaped the ways in which people have represented experienced and consumed their world Virginia Scharff and her coauthors explore interactions between gender and environment in history Ranging from colonial borderlands to transnational boundaries from mountaintop to marketplace they focus on historical representations of humans and nature on questions about consumption on environmental politics and on the complex reciprocal relations among human bodies and changing landscapes They also challenge the ecofeminist position by challenging the notion that men and women are essentially different creatures with biologically different destinies Each article shows how a person or group of people in history have understood nature in gendered terms and acted accordingly often with dire consequences for other people and organisms Here are considerations of the ways we study sexuality among birds of William Byrd's masking sexual encounters in his account of an eighteenth century expedition of how the ecology of fire in a changing built environment has reshaped firefighters own gendered identities Some are playful as in a piece on the evolution of snow bunnies to shred betties Others are dead serious as in a chilling portrait of how endocrine disrupters are reinventing humans animals and water systems from the cellular level out Aiding and adding significantly to the enterprise of environmental history Seeing Nature through Gender bridges gender history and environmental history in unexpected ways to show us how the natural world can remake the gendered patterns we've engraved on ourselves and on the planet

States of Trauma Piya Chatterjee, Manali Desai, Parama Roy, 2009 In the last couple of decades violence as an analytic category has loomed large in the historical literary and anthropological scholarship of South Asia The challenge of thinking violence in its gendered incarnations fully and in all its complexity is not only theoretical or critical but also irreducibly ethical and political given the proliferation of civil wars pogroms and riots fundamentalist movements insurgencies and counterinsurgencies and new technologies of violence and injury All of these simultaneously feature and help constitute gendered actors and gendered scripts of violence States of Trauma seeks to examine this terrain by staging a set of questions How are we to think about the moral charge that accrues to violence What is the relationship between violence and non violence In considering the moral and affective economy of violence how may we speak of the seductions of the idioms and practices of militarism and sexualized violence for women How are these seductions pleasures distinct from those proffered to men if indeed they are distinct The Lutheran Witness ,1882 Seeing Europe by Automobile Lee Meriwether,1911
