

CHARACTERISTIC AND CLASSIFICATION OF LIVING ORGANISMS

Characteristics of Living Organisms

- Movement: an action by an organism or part of an organism causing a change of position or place
- Respiration: the chemical reactions that break down nutrient molecules in living cells to release energy for metabolism
- Sensitivity: the ability to detect or sense stimuli in the internal or external environment and to make appropriate responses
- Growth: a permanent increase in size and dry mass by an increase in cell number or cell size or both
- Reproduction: the processes that make more of the same kind of organism
- Excretion: the removal from organisms of toxic materials, the waste products of metabolism (chemical reactions in cells including respiration) and substances in excess of requirements
- Nutrition: the taking in of materials for energy, growth and development; plants require light, carbon dioxide, water and ions; animals need organic compounds, ions and usually need water

How Organisms are Classified: Basics

- There are millions of species of organisms on Earth
- A species is defined as a group of organisms that can reproduce to produce fertile offspring
- These species can be classified into groups by the features that they share e.g. all mammals have bodies covered in hair, feed young from mammary glands and have external ears (pinnae)

The Binomial System

- Organisms were first classified by a Swedish naturalist called Linnaeus in a way that allows the subdivision of living organisms into smaller and more specialised groups
- The species in these groups have more and more features in common the more subdivided they get
- He named organisms in Latin using the binomial system where the scientific name of an organism is made up of two parts starting with the genus (always given a capital letter) and followed by the species (starting with a lower case letter)
- When typed binomial names are always in italics (which indicates they are Latin) e.g. Homo sapiens
- The sequence of classification is: Kingdom, Phylum, Class, Order, Family, Genus, Species
