Three Fs Using Survival Failure:

Predicting Recidivism Using Survival Models Peter Schmidt, Ann D. Witte, 2012-12-06 Our interest in the statistical modeling of data on the timing of recidivism began in the mid 1970s when we were both junior members of the econometrics department at the University of North Carolina. At that time methods of analyzing qualitative and limited variables were being developed rapidly in the econometric literature and we became interested in finding a suitable application for these new methods. Data on the timing of recidivism offered unique and interesting statistical challenges such as skewness of the distribution and the presence of censoring. Being young and foolish we decided it would be fun to try something really difficult. And being young and ignorant we were blissfully unaware of the concurrent developments in the statistical modeling of survival times that were then appearing in the biostatistics, operations research and criminological literatures. In the course of some earlier research we had learned that the North Carolina Department of Correction had an unusually well developed data base on their inmates. We approached the Department and asked if they would be interested in working with us to develop models that would predict when their former charges would return to their custody. They agreed because they were interested in using such models to evaluate rehabilitative programs and alternative prison management systems and to help project future prison populations.

Validating the Fatigue Endurance Limit for Hot Mix Asphalt Brian D. Prowell, 2010 At head of title National Cooperative Highway Research Program. The Statistical Analysis of Multivariate Failure Time Data Ross L. Prentice, Shanshan Zhao, 2019-05-14 The Statistical Analysis of Multivariate Failure Time Data A Marginal Modeling Approach provides an innovative look at methods for the analysis of correlated failure times. The focus is on the use of marginal single and marginal double failure hazard rate estimators for the extraction of regression information. For example in a context of randomized trial or cohort studies the results go beyond that obtained by analyzing each failure time outcome in a univariate fashion. The book is addressed to researchers, practitioners and graduate students and can be used as a reference or as a graduate course text. Much of the literature on the analysis of censored correlated failure time data uses frailty or copula models to allow for residual dependencies among failure times given covariates. In contrast this book provides a detailed account of recently developed methods for the simultaneous estimation of marginal single and dual outcome hazard rate regression parameters with emphasis on multiplicative Cox models. Illustrations are provided of the utility of these methods using Women's Health Initiative randomized controlled trial data of menopausal hormones and of a low fat dietary pattern intervention. As byproducts these methods provide flexible semiparametric estimators of pairwise bivariate survivor functions at specified covariate histories as well as semiparametric estimators of cross ratio and concordance functions given covariates. The presentation also describes how these innovative methods may extend to handle issues of dependent censoring, missing and mismeasured covariates and joint modeling of failure times and covariates setting the stage for additional theoretical and applied developments. This book extends and continues the style of the classic
