The Canon of the Old and New Testaments Ascertained; Or, the Bible Complete Without the Apocrypha and Unwritten Traditions. with Intr. Remarks by J. Mor Archibald Alexander,2013-09 This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher Not indexed Not illustrated 1831 edition Excerpt internal evidence is as strong in favour of the Gospels under consideration as of any other books of the New Testament There is no reason to think that Mark or Luke were capable of writing with such perfect simplicity and propriety without the aid of inspiration or the assistance of inspired men If we reject these books from the Canon we must give up the argument derived from internal evidence for the inspiration of the Sacred Scriptures altogether It is true the learned professor whose opinions we are opposing has said The oftener I compare their writings Mark s and Luke s with those of St Matthew and St John the greater are my doubts And speaking in another place of Mark he says In some immaterial instances he seems to have erred and gives it as his opinion That they who undertake to reconcile St Mark with St Matthew or to show that he is nowhere corrected by St John experience great difficulty and have not seldom to resort to unnatural explanations But the learned professor has not mentioned any particular cases of irreconcilable discrepancies between this evangelist and St Matthew nor does he indicate in what statements he is corrected by St John Until something of this kind is exhibited general remarks of this sort are deserving of no consideration To harmonize the Evangelists has always been found a difficult task but this does not prove that they contradict each other or that their accounts are irreconcilable Many things which at first sight appear contradictory are found upon closer examination to be perfectly harmonious and if there be some things which commentators have been unable satisfactorily to reconcile it is no more than what might be
