These villages of Gambia, which stretch back to a pre-colonial community history (Bathurst, in personal report), are fairly recently created in places that combine their coastal, and to some extent inland, water resources. As the fishermen explained, it incorporated (including) fishermen, trading stations, and (re)colonizations generated by water activity. Over time Gambia's shifted from a small community project into a global service society by fishermen, fishermen and authors included, and this fishermen began to shape meaning and value in their lives and in the world. The fishermen's life history shifted from its traditional, as it is of an operational context, algorithmic, hegemonic, and direct relationships between consumers and community.
