allows for a mechanistic understanding of the function of complex biological systems in health and their dysfunction in disease The National Heart Lung and Blood Institute NHLBI has recognized the importance of the systems biology approach for understanding normal physiology and perturbations associated with heart lung blood and sleep diseases and disorders In 2006 NHLBI announced the Exploratory Program in Systems Biology followed in 2010 by the NHLBI Systems Biology Collaborations The goal of these programs is to support collaborative teams of investigators in using experimental and computational strategies to integrate the component parts of biological networks and pathways into computational models that are based firmly on and validated using experimental data These validated models are then applied to gain insights into the mechanisms of altered system function in disease to generate novel hypotheses regarding these mechanisms that can be tested experimentally and to then use the results of experiments to refine the models The purpose of this Research Topic is to present the range of innovative new approaches being developed by investigators working in areas of systems biology that couple experimental and modeling studies to understand the cause and possible treatment of heart lung blood and sleep diseases and disorders This Research Topic will be of great interest to the cardiovascular research community as well as to the general community of systems biologists
