Beginners and Dummies Barbara Dawson, 2020-08-18 Meal prepping is making a meal or recipe then portioning it out to grab and go meals for later. If you've ever kept your leftovers from dinner to take with you for lunch then you've already mini meal prepped. Generally though meal prepping refers to preparing 3-7 days worth of food at a time. Think of it like making your lunches for the week all at once instead of making your lunch every morning. You can use this same technique for breakfast, lunch, dinner, and snacks. Meal prepping prevents food waste and reduces time spent outside your home, whether that's planning a diet or a budget. When making your meal plan, ask yourself the question: "How long will it take to eat healthy meals without having to do it every day?" Meal prepping is not for everyone. It is good for people who value convenience and more time than others. With meal prepping, you generally eat the same thing for a few days in a row so you don't look at leftovers or get bored with food. Meal prepping is not for everyone. If having more control over what you eat and maximizing your time, your budget is more valuable to you than doing something different every day, meal prepping is a good option. Meal prepping is generally not seen as a meal replacement or maybe one other person doing a whole meal. Meal prepping for a whole family would be quite difficult but it would be a great idea. Meal prepping is stored in the refrigerator for a slow day in a week. In addition to the way food is packed, the individual nuances of your refrigerator can impact the quality of your refrigerated meal. The smell of the food is not acceptable, the texture is not good, and the flavor is not good. Always begin with the refrigerator guidelines to be the FDA and then follow them to suit your own preferences. In general, I don't like to eat more than five days worth of food, but I find that to be a good amount of food to eat.
