

SPINAL CORD

2ND EDITION

- The two components of the nervous system are the central nervous system (CNS) and the peripheral nervous system (PNS) • The CNS is further subdivided into the brain and spinal cord
- The brain, often referred to as the seat of the mind, and the rest of the body, and includes sensory and motor structures • The sensory neurons of the somatic nervous system transmit signals (received or relayed) to skeletal muscle • This type of response is considered voluntary through conscious thought
- Movement is controlled by automatic reactions known as reflexes • The autonomic nervous system (ANS) controls smooth and cardiac muscle (heart) and glands
- Sensation, which are involuntary responses

- A dermatome is one of several overlapping areas of skin that are each supplied by the spinal (sensory) root of a single spinal nerve
- Because there is considerable overlap of adjoining dermatomes, an area is not innervated unless two or three consecutive spinal roots have lost function
