My Mourning Routine

When my mother passed away, I was 18. I remember feeling a sense of loss and grief that I had never experienced before. I was alone in the world, and I didn't know how to cope with the pain. I had to learn to live with the loss of my mother, and I had to learn to live with the loss of my father. I had to learn to live with the loss of my home, and I had to learn to live with the loss of my life.

I started to feel a sense of hope, a sense of peace, a sense of joy. I started to feel a sense of purpose, a sense of direction, a sense of meaning. I started to feel a sense of love, a sense of compassion, a sense of understanding. I started to feel a sense of hope, a sense of peace, a sense of joy. I started to feel a sense of purpose, a sense of direction, a sense of meaning. I started to feel a sense of love, a sense of compassion, a sense of understanding.

The routine that I started following was a mix of self-care, self-reflection, and self-compassion. I started to take time for myself, to do things that I enjoyed, to spend time with friends and family. I started to go to church, to pray, to meditate. I started to read books, to listen to music, to watch movies. I started to feel a sense of hope, a sense of peace, a sense of joy. I started to feel a sense of purpose, a sense of direction, a sense of meaning. I started to feel a sense of love, a sense of compassion, a sense of understanding.

These small, consistent steps made a difference in my life. I started to feel a sense of hope, a sense of peace, a sense of joy. I started to feel a sense of purpose, a sense of direction, a sense of meaning. I started to feel a sense of love, a sense of compassion, a sense of understanding.
