I Belong to This Band, Hallelujah! Laura Clawson,2011-06-01 The Sacred Harp choral singing tradition originated in the American South in the mid nineteenth century spread widely across the country and continues to thrive today Sacred Harp isn't performed but participated in ideally in large gatherings where as the a cappella singers face each other around a hollow square the massed voices take on a moving and almost physical power I Belong to This Band Hallelujah is a vivid portrait of several Sacred Harp groups and an insightful exploration of how they manage to maintain a sense of community despite their members often profound differences Laura Clawson's research took her to Alabama and Georgia to Chicago and Minneapolis and to Hollywood for a Sacred Harp performance at the Academy Awards a potent symbol of the conflicting forces at play in the twenty first century incarnation of this old genre Clawson finds that in order for Sacred Harp singers to maintain the bond forged by their love of music they must grapple with a host of difficult issues including how to maintain the authenticity of their tradition and how to carefully negotiate the tensions created by their disparate cultural religious and political beliefs contrast than similarity Canada and Australia are similar in various regards Post colonial in the sense that they are both former British colonies they now each have more than a century of stature as nation states By the beginning of the 21st century they are each modest in size but rich in ethnocultural diversity Nonetheless each country has some skeletons in the closet where openness to difference to indigenous and new immigrant groups are concerned Both countries are similarly both experiencing rapid shifts in cultural makeup with the biggest population increases in Australia coming from China India and South Africa and the biggest in Canada from Afro Caribbean South Asian countries and China The chapters in this anthology constitute an important comparative initiative Perhaps the most obvious point of comparison is that both countries create commercial music in the shadow of the hegemonic US and British industries As the authors demonstrate both proximity specifically Canada TM s nearness to the US and distance have advantages and disadvantages As the third and fourth largest Anglophone music markets for popular music they face similar issues relating to music management performance markets and production A second relationship as chapters in this anthology attest is the significant movement between the two countries in a matrix of exchange and influence among musicians that has rarely been studied hitherto Third both countries invite comparison with regard to the popular music production of diverse social groups within their national populations In particular the tremendous growth of indigenous popular music has resulted in opportunities as well as challenges Additionally however the strategies that different waves of immigrants have adopted to devise or localize popular music that was both competitive and meaningful to their own people as well as to a larger demographic bear comparison The historical similarities and differences as well as the global positionality of each country in the early 21st century then invites comparison relating to musical practices social organization lyrics as they articulate social issues career strategies industry structures and listeners
