Translation Wylie Burke MD, PhD, Kelly A. Edwards PhD, Sara Goering PhD, Suzanne Holland PhD, Susan Brown Trinidad MA, 2011-09-15 This book explores implicit choices made by researchers policy makers and funders regarding who benefits from society's investment in health research The authors focus specifically on genetic research and examine whether such research tends to reduce or exacerbate existing health disparities Using case examples to illustrate the issues the authors trace the path of genetics research from discovery through development and delivery to health outcomes Topics include breast cancer screening and treatment autism research pharmacogenetics prenatal testing newborn screening and youth suicide prevention Each chapter emphasizes the societal context of genetic research and illustrates how science might change if attention were paid to the needs of marginalized populations Written by experts in genetics health and philosophy this book argues that the scientific enterprise has a responsibility to respond to community needs to assure that research innovations achieve much needed health impacts Cumulated Index Medicus ,1983 Calling from the Rim ,1993

Resources in Education ,1984 Suicide Joan L. Hurlbut,1999 The purpose of this study was to perform an archival search for the factors of the Alaskan adolescent 15-24 year olds suicide epidemic The State of Alaska's adolescent suicide statistics as extrapolated from the Alaskan census and population data and the data from a related control group the adolescents of the 13th Regional Corporation based in Seattle Washington for the years 1980-1997 were used thereby providing a study population of approximately 80,000 adolescents The population consisted of approximately 16,000 Alaskan natives 55,000 whites and 8,000 others which were predominantly Black or Oriental Suicide according to the literature is a multidimensional malaise that is viewed as an indicator of societal health The use and acceptance of suicide has evolved over the centuries as society's value of an individual's life has changed As profound change altered cultures the use of suicide as a coping strategy increased In Alaska the adolescent suicide crude rate was almost nil until the time of statehood where upon it began escalating geometrically This study was reminiscent of Durkheim's sociological study of suicide in which he worked with society as a whole attempting to determine the productive factors of the social phenomenon of suicide Inferential statistics ANOVA and T tests were used to perform cross sectional analyses by race gender and geographic location all were found to be statistically significant potential indicators of suicide Page i Village High Schools Judith Kleinfeld, Franklin L.
