

11. Have a number of people available who will ask the engineer for Tie-Clips, Pens, Lighters, Special publications, Manuals, T.O.'s, etc. These people should be experts at sarcasm.
12. Ask him again how soon the equipment will be operating.
13. Ask him how you can get a soft job like his.
14. When he finally sets the item back into operation, tell him it was a good job, but it should have been done in half the time. Tell him the last service engineer was a real fine fellow and it took him only 1/2 the time to fix the same problem.
15. After the engineer leaves, write his Company and tell them that the equipment is worse now than what it was before. This will require his early return and enable him to go through the same rules again.
