

SOC by Jon Witt: Summary of the first 4 chapter

Human beings relate to each other in society and their relations are affected by the way a person sees another. Their relationships are usually affected by so many factors one being the economic factor. Sociology, therefore, tries to establish a relationship that exists between society and individuals and what comes about amidst their differences. Sociology, therefore, uses different tools such as Sociological Imaginations, Sociological Research, Culture and Socialization as the avenue to establish the existing relationships. For instance, for the case of Sociological Imagination, it helps to envision the society at a broader perspective thereby removing any limitation of the composition of the society.

One of the things that caught my attention when I was reading through chapter one is the Sociological Theories. A theory is simply a statement formulated to try and explain the existence of a certain phenomenon or a problem. Every society is made of some phenomena which appear to be mysteries and therefore its social beliefs are shaped from existing theories. Durkheim's theory on suicide, for instance, tries to explain that for an individual to take a certain action, he/she must have been influenced by certain social forces (Witt, 2018). To affirm his theory, he went forth to collect data in different countries and upon analyzing, he realized that different countries have different suicide rates which are influenced by social makeups of the countries. I really agree with him fully because indeed different
