PERSONAL

We examine our unique lenses and commit our teaching to questioning and disrupting instructional, institutional, and systemic inequities.

We develop a social justice stance by reflecting deeply on the world, our institutions, our classrooms, and ourselves.

We recognize that schools and schooling are systems in which privilege and oppression manifest. We work together to disrupt and decolonize these institutions to center our students' learning.

We provide opportunities for all of our students to learn. We make decisions about content, materials, and activities collaboratively with our students to best meet their needs.
