

Volvo and the environment

Respect for the environment is, along with safety and quality, one of the three Volvo core values.

Taking care of the environment expresses the concern of the Volvo Group to actively improve its environmental work and to reduce the effect on the environment of the products and processes involved in its business operations.

The Volvo environmental policy

The environmental policy of the Volvo Group is built up around the following strategies:

- Overview
The company's products are placed in a larger context where efforts are concentrated on reducing the effects on the environment of the products and processes in the business at every stage of the life cycle, from the original ideas to dismantling and waste handling. Customers, society in general, distributors and subcontractors are also included in this chain.
- Continuous improvement
Environmental work shall be integrated and followed up in all respects to maintain continual improvement.

This is expressed in the Volvo environmental policy, that shall permeate through, not only vehicle manufacture, but the whole life cycle of each vehicle, including the dismantling process and disposal of the remains.

- Technical development
The requirement for care of the environment shall be achieved through active research and development within such areas as transport, legislation and reduction of the effects on the environment of products, also aiming to reduce the use of environmentally harmful material.
- Efficient use of resources
The whole life cycle shall be taken into account in respect of products and processes in order to utilise resources as efficiently as possible and to facilitate waste handling.

Legislation, protection and safety regulations

All dismantling operations shall take place in accordance with applicable national legislation and ordinances in the areas of the environment, health and worker protection. This includes all work, handling, sorting, transportation, storage and other treatment of components, chemicals, filters and other material.

Respect shall be shown for land, surface water and sewage to avoid their pollution. Harmful substances and dangerous waste shall be handled and treated in well ventilated spaces in accordance with legislation and regulations.

Local safety instructions shall be familiar to and respected by the staff.

Environmentally harmful waste shall be transported by a carrier that has been approved by the authorities.

Volvo's own white, gray and black chemical lists shall be followed.

The work of dismantling involves contact with many substances that can pose risks to both the environment and health. It is therefore necessary to have the right knowledge, equipment and preparations in order to minimise these risks and to create the conditions for a safe job.
