2.5 Membrane Permeability

What Can Cross the Membrane?

Types of molecules that cross the membrane:

- Small nonpolar molecules (like O_2 and CO_2) can diffuse directly through the phospholipid bilayer without any help. These molecules are small and nonpolar.
- Small polar uncharged molecules (like water) can diffuse through the membrane in small amounts. Water molecules are very small and can slip between phospholipids, but they are polar and can form hydrogen bonds with water.
- Large polar molecules and ions (like glucose, amino acids, Na^+ , K^+ , and Cl^-) cannot cross the membrane on their own. They need transport proteins to help them cross. These molecules and ions typically cross through transport proteins in the membrane.

The hydrophobic tails of the phospholipids are the main barrier to the movement of most molecules across the membrane. They are nonpolar and repel water and other polar molecules.

How Different Molecules Cross the Membrane

Molecule Type	Examples	Can Cross Easily?	Needs Transport Protein?
Small nonpolar	O_2 , CO_2 , N_2	Yes	No
Small polar uncharged	Water	Yes (limited)	No (large amounts)
Large polar	Glucose, amino acids	No	Yes
Ions	Na^+ , K^+ , Cl^-	No	Yes

1.5 Representing a Quantitative Variable with Graphs

Remember that a quantitative variable (or quantitative variable) refers to variables that can be measured and are numerical values. Quantitative variables can be represented by graphs.

- A discrete variable can take on a limited number of values. The number of children in a family is an example of a discrete variable. Examples of discrete variables include the number of children in a family, the number of votes in an election, and the number of items in a collection.
- A continuous variable can take on an infinite number of values, but there are limits to the values. The height of a person is an example of a continuous variable. It is always possible to find a value between two values. Examples of continuous variables include the height of a person, the weight of a person, and the time it takes to run a mile.

This page will describe how to represent and display quantitative data. The following table is a summary of the different types of graphs that can be used to represent quantitative data. The goal is to help you understand the different types of graphs and how to use them to represent data.
