- What does the literature tell us about stress, stressors, stressors, and stressors?
  - Stress is a response to a stimulus, which can be either physical or psychological. It is a state of mind that is characterized by a feeling of tension or pressure.
  - Stressors are the external factors that cause stress. They can be physical (e.g., noise, heat, cold) or psychological (e.g., work, family, social life).
  - The stress response is a physiological reaction to a stressor. It involves the release of hormones (e.g., cortisol) and the activation of the sympathetic nervous system.
  - The stress response can be either acute or chronic. Acute stress is a short-term response to a specific stressor. Chronic stress is a long-term response to a persistent stressor.
  - The stress response can have both positive and negative effects. It can help us cope with stressors and improve our performance. However, it can also lead to health problems (e.g., heart disease, depression) and reduce our quality of life.
