Over the past century educational psychologists and researchers have posited many theories to explain how individuals learn i.e. how they acquire, organize and deploy knowledge and skills. The 20th century can be considered the century of psychology on learning and related fields of interest such as motivation, cognition, metacognition, etc. and it is fascinating to see the various mainstreams of learning remembered and forgotten over the 20th century and note that basic assumptions of early theories survived several paradigm shifts of psychology and epistemology. Beyond folk psychology and its naïve theories of learning, psychological learning theories can be grouped into some basic categories such as behaviorist learning theories, connectionist learning theories, cognitive learning theories, constructivist learning theories, and social learning theories. Learning theories are not limited to psychology and related fields of interest but rather we can find the topic of learning in various disciplines such as philosophy and epistemology, education, information science, biology, and as a result of the emergence of computer technologies especially also in the field of computer sciences and artificial intelligence. As a consequence, machine learning struck a chord in the 1980s and became an important field of the learning sciences in general. As the learning sciences became more specialized and complex, the various fields of interest were widely spread and separated from each other. As a consequence, even presently there is no comprehensive overview of the sciences of learning or the central theoretical concepts and vocabulary on which researchers rely. The Encyclopedia of the Sciences of Learning provides an up-to-date, broad, and authoritative coverage of the specific terms mostly used in the sciences of learning and its related fields, including relevant areas of instruction, pedagogy, cognitive sciences, and especially machine learning and knowledge engineering. This modern compendium will be an indispensable source of information for scientists, educators, engineers, and technical staff active in all fields of learning. More specifically, the Encyclopedia provides fast access to the most relevant theoretical terms, provides up-to-date, broad, and authoritative coverage of the most important theories within the various fields of the learning sciences and adjacent sciences, and communication technologies supplies clear and precise explanations of the theoretical terms. Cross references to related entries and up-to-date references to important research and publications. The Encyclopedia also contains biographical entries of individuals who have substantially contributed to the sciences of learning. The entries are written by a distinguished panel of researchers in the various fields of the learning sciences.

Enhancing Reflection within Situated Learning Alexis M. Stoner, Katherine S. Cennamo, 2018-02-21 This innovative brief provides guidance on promoting reflection in situated learning by incorporating mindfulness strategies, tapping into a surge of research interest in exploring mindfulness as an instructional strategy associated with positive learning outcomes It illustrates the benefits of continuous reflection within situated learning and how mindfulness can be incorporated before during and after the learning experience to enhance the reflective experience Critically the authors present a new conceptual model that synthesizes theories and methods from three different areas of study mindfulness situated learning and reflection to provide a new perspective and instructional approach that has great potential to positively impact outcomes in situated learning Among the other topics covered Strategies for reflection in situated learning Strategies for reflection in action in situated learning Mindfulness strategies for situated learning A conceptual model incorporating mindfulness to enhance reflection Enhancing Reflection within Situated Learning is an exciting and pioneering resource that offers practical guidance to educators and instructional designers interested in incorporating methods and approaches for integrating mindfulness and reflection across instructional environments

An Analysis of Jean Lave and Etienne Wenger's Situated Learning Charmi Patel,2018-02-21 Social anthropologist Jean Lave and computer scientist Etienne Wenger's seminal Situated Learning helped change the fields of cognitive science and pedagogy by approaching learning from a novel angle Traditionally theories of learning and education had focused on processes of cognition the mental processes of knowledge formation that occur within an individual Lave and Wenger chose to look at learning not as an individual process but a social one As so often with the creative thinking process a small simple shift in emphasis was all that was required to show things in an entirely different light What Situated Learning illustrated and emphasized was that learning is dependent on its social situation Even though the most effective way to learn is through interaction with experts and peers in a community organized around a common interest the traditional cognitive learning model failed to account for the way in which learners interact with their community of practice The new hypothesis that Lave and Wenger developed was that learning can be seen as a continuously evolving set of relationships situated within a social context This allowed Lave and Wenger to place discussions of apprenticeship and workplace learning on a new footing and led in turn to the book's impressive impact in business and management scholarship

Reder, Roberta L. Klatzky, 1994 Abstract This paper addresses issues associated with transfer of training in particular the importance of mimicking the contexts of application during training When will a skill transfer from one situation of application to another and what aspects of training affect a learner s ability to transfer the learning to new situations Although there exist many examples of failure to show good transfer of training the failures are more surprising and tend to mask the successes With appropriate training there is generalization to a variety of contexts Such training should include variable contexts during instruction concrete examples and abstract rules and procedures Claims made by proponents of Situated Learning Theory suggest that training must be done in the context of the situation of application We agree that learning is unlikely to transfer if taught in only one context with no examples from other contexts however because it is difficult to anticipate all future contexts of application trainers are advised not to so constrain instruction Although training and transfer should have identical elements there is evidence that part whole training is often the appropriate method of instruction This argues against apprenticeship learning during early stages of acquisition for many skills Further too much fidelity in simulation may lack cost effectiveness and may even be detrimental to the early acquisition process Situated Learning in Interpreter Education Annette Miner, Brenda Nicodemus, 2021-05-30 This book provides a theoretical and pragmatic guide to the use of situated learning within structured interpreting programs Proponents of situated learning theory believe that meaningful learning occurs when students interact with others in the social contexts in which they will be working With such interactions students have the opportunity to apply their theoretical knowledge to authentic contexts that they will encounter throughout their professional lives While a limited number of research articles exist about the use of situated learning in interpreter education this is the first full book to provide the foundations for situated learning theory show how to implement situated learning in interpreter education and offer practical applications for maximizing authenticity in interpreting classrooms

Learning, Teaching, and Community Lucinda Pease-Alvarez, Sandra R. Schechter, 2006-04-21 This volume brings together established and new scholarly voices to explore how participatory and situated approaches to learning can contribute to educational innovation The contributors critical examinations of educational programming and engagements provide insights into how educators youth families and community members understand and enact their commitments to diversity and equitable access Collectively these essays complicate notions of community alerting readers to ways in which community can be constructed other than in geographical and ethnoracial terms as alliances and collaborations of individuals joining together to accomplish or negotiate shared agendas The focus on agency combined with social context a dialectic to which all of the authors speak enlarges and invigorates our sense of what is pedagogically possible in societies characterized by diversity and flux Part I Linking Pedagogy to Communities focuses on dynamic initiatives where practitioners collaborate with community members and other professionals as they acknowledge and build on the cultural linguistic and intellectual resources of ethnic minority students and their communities Part II Professional Learning for Diversity centers on the authors experiences in facilitating opportunities for working with prospective and practicing teachers to develop situated pedagogies highlighting both the challenges that emerge and the transformations that occur Part III Learning in Community and Community in Learning illustrates how educational innovation can extend beyond the realm of schools and classrooms by elucidating ways in which individuals construct learning venues in out of school settings Learning Teaching and Community Contributions of Situated and Participatory Approaches to Educational Innovation is a compelling and timely text ideally suited for courses focused on teacher education and development informal learning equity and education multilingual and multicultural education language and culture educational foundations and school reform educational restructuring and will be equally of interest to faculty researchers and professionals in these areas

Situated Learning in Virtual Worlds Lakshmi Goel,2008 A Comparison of Situated Learning Versus Unsituated Learning Environments Presented on Health Information Web Sites Catherine J. Crim,2000 The Effect of Situated Learning on Knowledge Transfer of Students with and Without Disabilities in Inclusive Classrooms Jiyoung Kim,2012 The purpose of this meta analysis was to examine the effect of situated learning on the academic performance of students with and without disabilities in inclusive general education classrooms While previous research has reported the overall effectiveness of situated learning relatively few studies have been conducted to investigate how situated learning influences students academic performances in inclusive settings where students with and without disabilities work together Moreover although the main interest of situated learning is about how to apply basic knowledge and skills to an authentic context and beyond this how to transfer them into a similar but novel situation in everyday life little has been known about its effectiveness on students achievement in terms of knowledge transfer In this study a meta analytical statistical method was employed to investigate the effect of situated learning and its effectiveness was examined according to the three levels of knowledge transfer knowledge acquisition application and transfer A total of 19 situated learning studies both published and unpublished were analyzed Each primary study's effect sizes were calculated using Hedges g with the bias correction and then combined into the three weighted average effect sizes regarding the levels of knowledge transfer This meta analytic study found that on all of the levels of knowledge transfer the situated learning is effective for the learning of students with and without disabilities in inclusive general education classrooms In the random effects model the situated instruction produced a weighted mean effect size estimate of 2.049 for knowledge acquisition 1.836 for knowledge application 1.185 for knowledge transfer In addition the percentage of students with special needs in general education classrooms had a negative influence on the effectiveness of situated learning However the pattern of results also showed that the proportion of students with special needs in general education classrooms does not influence as greatly the learning of knowledge transfer as it does knowledge acquisition or application Situated Learning A Complete Guide - 2020 Edition Gerardus Blokdyk,2020-02-16 How will Situated learning decisions be made and monitored Think of your Situated learning project what are the main functions Does the problem have ethical dimensions Who are the people involved in developing and
