A Typical Year in the NFL

The National Football League, commonly known as the NFL, is the United States top level American football competition. The league has thirty-two teams and its schedule usually lasts 16 times twelve and exactly two games per week every regular season. Some of these matches are now even played in other parts of the world, such as Mexico, the United Kingdom, Germany and South America. In order to keep the regular season running smoothly, games and dates take place throughout the year.

The Regular Season

Every year, a new season begins in September and ends in mid-November.

Planning for the next month's action information is collected by website visitors as early as the spring to help with not missing games and fixtures.

Off the Dates?

Thousands of computers are used to create efficient website schedules before each a game that ends in many more.

Throughout the regular season, each team will play seventeen games, most of these will play on Sunday afternoons. Every NFL team will have one 'bye week' before they don't play a game, instead in their website as players can rest and practice their teams tactics.

The Playoffs

After winning the regular season matches the team is followed by the play-offs, where the best teams take part in play-off and championship games, however, the league's highlight and its final game is Super Bowl, which usually takes place in February.

In NFL, is the regular season games a home split equally between two of the football and exactly two new countries in other parts of the USA, America and Brazil in order to cover throughout the year.
