

Welcome to the Paraprofessional Training Project

The SUSD's Office of Specialty Designed Instruction, in partnership with SEEC, has launched the Paraprofessional Training Project to support professional growth for certified Special Education (SPED) Paraprofessionals. Through this initiative, certified Special Education Paraprofessionals can receive compensation for completing up to three courses from the Paraprofessional Training Project Catalog. While designed to enhance existing district trainings, these courses are not intended to replace the areas of preparation needed to earn the Special Education Paraprofessional Certificate, and are open to all learners interested in building their skills.

sources of self efficacy for paraprofessionals This study recruited eleven paraprofessionals working for the New York City Department of Education NYC DOE to participate in two focus groups in order to gauge their perceptions on acquired skill level the quantity and quality of their training and the supervision and support provided by administrators teachers and colleagues Participant responses revealed four primary themes with the following implications 1 paraprofessionals desire comprehensive pre service training and ongoing professional development alongside classroom teachers 2 classroom teachers are key in paraprofessional success and should provide frequent feedback 3 school administrators ought to offer development or advancement opportunities and take an active role to supervise paraprofessionals and 4 paraprofessionals benefit from collegial relationships with peers for guidance and support Using thematic analysis the researcher found that verbal persuasion and vicarious experiences were the primary sources influencing paraprofessional success and self efficacy In light of the findings recommendations are made to improve policy and practice
