bicycle as a crucial literary and cultural object In a selection of turn of the century fiction travel writing and non fiction cycling is revealed to be a favoured literary device allowing writers to structure their narratives in new ways or depict a fresh sensory and aesthetic experience Moreover this study reveals that from its earliest days the bicycle played a compelling counter cultural role proposing an alternative modernity that directly challenged bourgeois patriarchal capitalist society From blurring gender and class divisions to offering a more empowering interaction with the machine and allowing an embodied and social experience of space the bicycle pointed a human powered route to progress amidst increasingly mechanised visions of the future Motor Cycling and Motoring ,1912 Tyne & Wear Cycle Map 34
