Teutoburg Forest AD 9 Michael McNally, 2011-01-18 Osprey's study of one of the most important battles of the long lasting Germanic Wars 113 BC 439 AD Arminius a young member of the Cheruscan tribe under the Roman Empire felt that Rome could be beaten in battle and that such a victory would guarantee the freedom of the Germans as a confederation of independent tribes led by the Cherusicans who would in turn be led by him Throughout AD 8 and the early part of AD 9 Arminius used his position under the governor of Germania Inferior well ostensibly promoting Rome whilst in reality welding the tribes together in an anti Roman alliance agreeing with his confederates that they would wait until the Roman garrison had moved to their summer quarters and then rise up against the invaders With the arrival of September the time soon came for the Roman troops to return to their stations along the Rhine and as they marched westwards through the almost impenetrable Teutoburg Forest Arminius sprang his trap In a series of running battles in the forest Varus army consisting of three Roman Legions XVII XVIII and XIX and several thousand auxiliaries a total of roughly 20 000 men was destroyed The consequences for Rome were enormous the province of Germania was now virtually undefended and Gaul was open to a German invasion which although it never materialized led a traumatized Augustus to decree that henceforth the Rhine would remain the demarcation line between the Roman world and the German tribes in addition to which the destroyed legions were never re formed or their numbers reused in the Roman Army after AD 9 the sequence of numbers would run from I to XVI and then from XX onwards it was as if the three legions had never existed

Roman Soldier vs Germanic Warrior Lindsay Powell, 2014-05-20. From the annals of Tacitus we get a one-sided vision of the Romano-Germanic wars. More recent scholarship, including Osprey's Teutoburg Forest Campaign book, paints a more balanced picture. Yet there's still a lot of ground to cover on the subject. The reigns of Augustus and his successor Tiberius saw an epic struggle between the Romans and local peoples for the territory between the Rhine and Elbe rivers in what is now Germany. Following two decades of Roman occupation, Germania Magna erupted into revolt in AD 9 following the loss of the three legions commanded by Publius Quinctilius Varus to the Cheruscan nobleman Arminius and an alliance of Germanic nations in the dense forests of the Teutoburger Wald. The Romans' initial panic subsided as it became clear that Arminius and his allies could not continue the war into Germania Inferior on the western bank of the Rhine, and Imperial troops poured into the region as the Romans decided how best to resolve the situation. In AD 14, Tiberius' adopted son Germanicus Caesar quelled a mutiny among Roman forces in the area, then took his men on a quick punitive raid into Germanic territory. In the following year, he snatched the wife and father-in-law of Arminius and located the site of the Varian Disaster, where he oversaw the burial of the bones of Roman dead and erected a cenotaph. In AD 16, Germanicus set out to engage his Cheruscan adversary and defeat him decisively, with a view to tipping the balance of power in the region as a prelude to restoring full Roman control over territory between the Rhine and the Elbe. By that summer, Germanicus had tracked down Arminius to a location on the Weser River in the region of modern-day Minden. An initial engagement, called the Battle of the Weser River, ended in a draw when a Roman cavalry charge was repulsed by Arminius' own cavalry, and Germanicus withdrew his men. Having transferred his force across the river and camped for the night, he laid out a plan for a set-piece battle with his opponent at a place called the Plain of Idistaviso. Idistaviso was the first battle the Romans won against Arminius since Teutoburg. It proved they could beat him. Despite his unique understanding of both Roman and Germanic strategy and tactics, Arminius' failure to anticipate the Roman defence in depth, compounded by dissimilarities in arms and equipment and confusion on the ground, made this battle particularly vicious and bloody. Better led and disciplined, and with a robust battle strategy, Germanicus' men decisively defeated Arminius. At the ensuing Battle of the Angrivarian Wall, the Romans crushed the Germans again. Featuring full-color artwork, specially drawn maps, and an array of revealing illustrations depicting weapons equipment key locations and personalities this study offers key insights into the tactics leadership combat performance and subsequent reputations of the Roman soldiers and their Germanic opponents pitched into a series of pivotal actions on the Imperial frontier that would influence Roman German relations for decades to come
