

Switching Codes, Switching Code: Bilinguals' Emotional Responses in English and Greek

Alexia Panayiotou

University of Cyprus, Nicosia, Cyprus

This paper investigates the verbal construction of emotions in a bilingual/bicultural setting, the target languages and cultures being American English and Cypriot Greek. To examine whether bilingual speakers express different emotions in their respective languages, a study was carried out with 10 bilingual/bicultural professionals. A scenario was presented to them first in English and a month later in Greek and their verbal reactions were recorded. The participants' responses were then analysed through three questions: (1) whether they translate from one language to the other; (2) whether and when codeswitching occurs; (3) whether there is a pattern in the use of emotion words. The analysis of the results shows that respondents displayed different reactions to the same story depending on the language it was read to them in. The paper argues that participants changed their social code, i.e. sociocultural expectations, with the change in linguistic code. These findings raise interesting questions about the relationship between language, emotions and cognition, and the formation of the bilingual self.

Introduction

This paper addresses an important theoretical question in research on the cultural construction of emotions: does one's emotional reaction shift when the language shifts? Specifically, this paper asks: if the same scenario or situation appears in a different language and/or culture, does a person (1) interpret this scenario differently? and (2) provide a different emotional response? Working within a social constructionist framework, I explored the expression of emotions in a bilingual/bicultural setting, the target languages and cultures being American English and Cypriot Greek. In the study, 10 bilingual/bicultural professionals were presented a scenario first in English and a month later in Greek. Their verbal reactions to the text were recorded and the subsequent responses analysed by asking whether they translated from one language to the other in the two contexts; whether codeswitching occurred and why; and whether a pattern existed in the emotion words used.

The study relied on the use of bilingual/bicultural informants in order to address the issue of translatability of emotion words in English and Greek. In doing so, it also addressed the critique of previous cross-cultural psychological research which saw monolingual subjects used in this type of research as rarely equivalent (Mesquita & Frijda, 1992). Bilinguals, as people who cross physical, linguistic and cultural boundaries, offer an optimal pool

Code-switching and Code-mixing Ping Liu, 2008-06-17 Seminar paper from the year 2006 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Linguistics grade 2.3 University of Stuttgart Institut für Linguistik language English abstract The aim of this paper is to provide a complete overview over the phenomenon of code switching and code mixing The history of the research of code change has undergone various periods that have shown how complex the phenomenon of codeswitching and code mixing are In the course of research of code change it has become clear that code switching and code mixing can be investigated from different perspectives Researchers focused on code change after they had realized that linguistic forms and practices are interrelated And code switching mixing in their turn embodies not only variation but the link between linguistic form and language use as social practice Research from a linguistic and psycholinguistic perspective has focused on understanding the nature of the systematic of code change as a way of revealing linguistic and potentially cognitive processes Research on the psychological and social dimensions of code switching mixing has largely been devoted to answering the questions of why speakers code change and what the social meaning of code change is for them The sociological perspective later goes on to attempt to use the answer to those questions to illuminate how language operates as a social process Throughout the history of research on code switching mixing it has been proposed that it is necessary to link all these forms of analysis and that indeed it is that possibility that is one of the most compelling reasons for studying code switching mixing since such a link would permit the development and verification of hypotheses regarding the relationship among linguistic cognitive and social processes in a more general way Heller Pfaff 1996 As with any aspect of language contact phenomena research on code switching and code mixing are firstly plagued by the issue of terminological confusion In communications a code is a rule for converting a piece of information for example a letter word or phrase into another form or representation not necessarily of the same sort In communications and information processing encoding is the process by which a source object performs this conversion of information into data which is then sent to a receiver observer such as a data processing system en wikipedia org wiki Code In semiotics the concept of a code is of fundamental importance Saussure emphasized that signs only acquire meaning and value when they are interpreted in relation to each other Code Switching: A sociolinguistic perspective Thuy Nguyen, 2014-04-01 Nowadays the alternation between two languages which is known as code switching is rather the norm than exception in many communities due to the fact that there are nearly seven thousand languages spoken throughout the world and more than half of the world's population is estimated to be bilingual and engages in code switching Code switching remains one of the central issues in bilingualism research For a long time code switching has been considered as a lack of linguistic competence since it was taken as evidence that bilinguals are not able to acquire two languages or keep them apart properly Nowadays it is the common belief that code switching is grammatically structured and systematic and therefore can no longer be regarded as deficient language behaviour The

Code-Switching in Bilingual Communication Anastasia Schmidt,2014-04-16 This book is about the use of two languages in everyday life Bilingualism is a facet of nearly every country in the world and code switching is a widespread characteristic of bilingual speech An obvious and at the same time interesting aspect is that bilinguals will of course stay within one language when talking to monolinguals However when talking to other bilinguals they will probably use both languages Thus in bilingual conversations they often switch from one language to another and frequently even within an utterance Such kinds of switches call for a special competence of the two languages involved But how well the bilinguals have to know each of the languages is a justifiable question These switches are not arbitrary since they may depend on the situation of the conversation the topic of the conversation the emotional aspects involved the language preference of the speaker and the need to express the own identity The goal of this book is to look in detail at code switching in bilingual communication with the help of the present study on Russian German bilinguals A Minimalist Approach to Intrasentential Code

Code-switching Between Structural and Sociolinguistic Perspectives Gerald Stell, Kofi Yakpo, 2015-02-17

The study of code switching has been carried out from linguistic, psycholinguistic and sociolinguistic perspectives largely in isolation from each other. This volume attempts to unite these three research strands by placing at the centre of the enquiry the role played by social factors in the occurrence, forms and outcomes of code switching. The contributions in this volume are divided into three parts: code switching between cognition and socio-pragmatics, multilingual interaction and identity, and code switching and social structure. The case studies represent contact settings on five continents and feature languages with diverse linguistic affiliations. They are predictive and descriptive in their research goals and rely on experimental or naturalistic data. But they share the common goal of seeking to explain how social structures, ideologies and identity impact on the grammatical and conversational features of code switching and language mixing and on the emergence of mixed languages. Given its scope, this volume is a significant addition to the empirical and theoretical foundations of the study of code switching. It is also of relevance to the general debate on the inter-relationships between language and society.

Code Switching provides a thorough introduction to the topic from a multi-disciplinary perspective incorporating views from sociolinguistics, grammatical theory and psycholinguistics.

Multilingualism, Cultural Identity, and Education in Morocco Moha Ennaji, 2005-01-20

In this book I attempt to show how colonial and postcolonial political forces have endeavoured to reconstruct the national identity of Morocco on the basis of cultural representations and ideological constructions closely related to nationalist and ethnolinguistic trends. I discuss how the issue of language is at the centre of the current cultural and political debates in Morocco. The present book is an investigation of the ramifications of multilingualism for language choice patterns and attitudes among Moroccans. More importantly, the book assesses the roles played by linguistic and cultural factors in the development and evolution of Moroccan society. It also focuses on the impact of multilingualism on cultural authenticity and national identity. Having been involved in research on language and culture for many years, I am particularly interested in linguistic and cultural assimilation or alienation and under what conditions it takes place especially today that more and more Moroccans speak French and are influenced by Western social behaviour more than ever before In the process I provide the reader with an updated description of the different facets of language use language maintenance and shift and language attitudes focusing on the linguistic situation whose analysis is often blurred by emotional reactions ideological discourses political biases simplistic assessments and ethnolinguistic identities

Code-Switching in the Matrix Language-Frame Model Lena P., 2016-03-29 Bachelor Thesis from the year 2014 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Linguistics grade 2 3 University of Cologne Englische Sprache und Literatur I language English abstract The purpose of this paper is to look at the relation between structural and social factors in the formation of CS patterns in bi multilingual communities Furthermore the general applicability of the MLF and the MM to the CS data from different bilingual communities will be explored At the beginning the concept of code switching and its typology will be introduced In section 3 2 the MLF will be presented in order to define morphological and syntactical constraints for CS Then in the frame of the MM possible motivations for CS will be examined These are followed by the perspective on the relation of both models to each other In Chapter 4 using the MLF and the MM CS data from several bilingual communities will be analysed and finally problematic issues in both models will be discussed While monolinguals can vary their utterances by means of changing styles within a language or a dialect through speech rate or intonation bilinguals can do the same in both languages plus they can switch between the languages Thus the speech of bilingual speakers is interesting for research Many researchers have examined this language contact phenomenon and have tried to explain how and why people code switch The study of CS has developed in two main directions structural that is grammatical and sociolinguistic also called pragmatic aspect Originally CS was considered to be the result of poor language competence in both languages Later in the 1970s linguists for example Gumperz 1972 and Pfaff 1979 suggested that mixing between languages does not occur randomly but rather follows certain grammatical rules Many grammatical models have been proposed to account for the grammatical constraints in CS One of the most influential models the Matrix Language Frame Model MLF was introduced by Myers Scotton 1993b The model is based on two asymmetries matrix language vs embedded language and system vs content morphemes However not only structural factors but also social and psychological factors influence the speakers motivation to engage in CS It is one of the biggest challenges in the research on CS to link all these factors to provide a better understanding of the phenomenon of CS Therefore Myers Scotton 1993a went further and developed the Markedness Model MM in an attempt to explain why bilingual speakers code switch and how the social environment influences the type of CS present in the community
