Singapore In The Global System Singapore In The Global System:

Singapore in the Global System Peter Preston, 2007-12-21 This book tracks the phases of Singapore's economic and political development arguing that its success was always dependent upon the territories links with the surrounding region and the wider global system and suggests that managing these links today will be the key to the country's future Singapore has followed a distinctive historical development trajectory It was one of a number of cities which provided bases for the expansion of the British empire in the East But the Pacific War provided local elites with their chance to secure independence In Singapore the elite disciplined and mobilized their population and built successfully on their colonial inheritance Today the city state prospers in the context of its regional and global networks and sustaining and nurturing these are the keys to its future But there are clouds on the elite's horizons domestically the population is restive with inequality migration and surplus repression causing concern and internationally the strategy of constructing a business hub economy is being widely copied and both Hong Kong and Shanghai are significant competitors This book discusses these issues and argues that although success is likely to characterize Singapore's future the elite will have to address these significant domestic and international problems National Culture and the New Global System Frederick Buell, 1994-09 The three worlds theory is perhaps still the basis for our dominant assumptions about geopolitical and geocultural order writes Frederick Buell but its hold on our imagination and faith is passing fast In its place a startlingly different model the notion that the world is somehow interconnected into a single system has emerged expressing the perception that global relationships constitute not three separate worlds but a single network In the wake of disillusionment with anticolonial nationalism and in response to a wide variety of economic political demographic and technological changes Buell argues we have come increasingly to view the world as complexly interconnected In National Culture and the New Global System he considers how the notion of national culture has been conceived and reconceived in the postwar period For much of the period the three world theory provided economic political and cultural models for mapping a world of nation states More recently new notions of interconnectedness have been developed ones that have had profound and sometimes startling effects on cultural production and theory Surveying recent cultural history and theory Buell shows how our understanding of cultural production relates closely to transformations in models of the world order Singapore Journal of International & Comparative Law, 2003 Transportation Routes and Systems of the World, Development of Steam-carrying Power on Land and Sea, 1800 to 1908 and Table of Distances from New York, New Orleans, San Francisco, and Port Townsend to the Principal Ports of the World and the Principal Cities of the United States, 1909 The Statesman's Year-book, 1910 The Cable and Wireless Communications of the World Frank James Brown, 1930 *Carr V.
