Beginners and Dummies Barbara Dawson, 2020-08-18 Meal prepping is making a meal or recipe then portioning it out to grab and go meals for later. If you've ever kept your leftovers from dinner to take with you for lunch then you've already mini meal prepped. Generally though meal prepping refers to preparing 3-7 days worth of food at a time. Think of it like making your lunches for the week all at once instead of making your lunch throughout the day. You can use this same technique for breakfast, lunch, dinner, and snacks. Meal prepping prevents food waste and reduces time spent outside your home, whether that's planning a diet or a budget. When making your meal plan, ask yourself the question: "How long will it take to eat healthy meals without having to do it every day?" Meal prepping is not for everyone. It is good for those who value convenience and free more time than cost. With meal prepping, you generally eat the same thing for a few days in a row so you don't get bored with food. Meal prepping is not for those who are maximizing their time or budget. It is more of a lifestyle than a cooking technique. Meal prepping is not for everyone. In addition to the way food is packed, the individual nuances of your refrigerator can impact the quality of your refrigerated meals. The length of time the food is acceptable to eat and its texture and flavor will be a big factor. Always begin with the refrigerator's guidelines to be sure you are following the FDA and then follow your own preferences. In general, I find that food that has been frozen for a long time is better than food that has been frozen for a short time. Meal Prep
