My Mourning Routine

Living with cancer doesn't mean mourning. Mourning usually means mourning the loss of someone who has died. But when you have cancer, you are mourning the loss of your body, your life, your future, your ability to do things you love, your ability to live the way you want to live.

It is okay to feel grief. Grief is a natural response to loss. But it is also a warning sign. It is a sign that you are not taking care of yourself. It is a sign that you are not taking care of your body. It is a sign that you are not taking care of your mind. It is a sign that you are not taking care of your spirit.

The routine that I developed over the years of living with cancer is a simple one. It is a routine that I call my "Mourning Routine". It is a routine that I use to help me deal with the loss of my body, my life, my future, my ability to do things I love, my ability to live the way I want to live.

There are several important steps in my routine. The first step is to acknowledge the loss. The second step is to accept the loss. The third step is to grieve the loss. The fourth step is to move forward. The fifth step is to live the way I want to live.
