Meal prepping is making a meal or recipe, then portioning it out to store for later. If you've ever had leftovers from dinner to take with you for lunch the next day, you've had mini meal prepped. Generally, meal prepping refers to preparing 3-7 days worth of meals in advance, which can save time and money, and reduce stress. It involves planning, grocery shopping, and cooking multiple meals at once, then storing them in the refrigerator or freezer for later consumption. The goal is to have healthy, convenient meals ready to go, so you don't have to spend time cooking every day. This can be especially helpful for busy weeknights or for those who don't have a lot of time to cook. There are many benefits to meal prepping, including saving money on takeout or delivery, reducing food waste, and improving nutrition. It can also help you stick to a healthy diet and make better food choices. Overall, meal prepping is a great way to simplify your cooking and eating habits, and it can be a valuable tool for anyone looking to improve their health and wellness.
