The MANTLE and OTHER STORIES, New Edition Nicholas Gogol, 2015-02-07 In a certain Russian ministerial department But it is perhaps better that I do not mention which department it was. There are in the whole of Russia no persons more sensitive than Government officials. Each of them believes if he is annoyed in any way that the whole official class is insulted in his person. Recently an Isprawnik country magistrate I do not know of which town is said to have drawn up a report with the object of showing that ignoring Government orders people were speaking of Isprawniks in terms of contempt. In order to prove his assertions he forwarded with his report a bulky work of fiction in which on about every tenth page an Isprawnik appeared generally in a drunken condition. In order therefore to avoid any unpleasantness I will not definitely indicate the department in which the scene of my story is laid and will rather say in a certain chancellery. Well in a certain chancellery there was a certain man who as I cannot deny was not of an attractive appearance. He was short had a

face marked with smallpox was rather bald in front and his forehead and cheeks were deeply lined with furrows to say nothing of other physical imperfections Such was the outer aspect of our hero as produced by the St Petersburg climate As regards his official rank for with us Russians the official rank must always be given he was what is usually known as a permanent titular councillor one of those unfortunate beings who as is well known are made a butt of by various authors who have the bad habit of attacking people who cannot defend themselves Our hero s family name was Bashmatchkin his baptismal name Akaki Akakievitch Perhaps the reader may think this name somewhat strange and far fetched but he can be assured that it is not so and that circumstances so arranged it that it was quite impossible to give him any other name This happened in the following way Akaki Akakievitch was born if I am not mistaken on the night of the 23rd of March His deceased mother the wife of an official and a very good woman immediately made proper arrangements for his baptism When the time came she was lying on the bed before the door At her right hand stood the godfather Ivan Ivanovitch Jeroshkin a very important person who was registrar of the senate at her left the godmother Anna Semenovna Byelobrushkova the wife of a police inspector a woman of rare virtues Three names were suggested to the mother from which to choose one for the child Mokuja Sossuja or Khozdazat No she said I don t like such names In order to meet her wishes the church calendar was opened in another place and the names Triphiliy Dula and Varakhasiy were found This is a punishment from heaven said the mother What sort of names are these I never heard the like If it had been Varadat or Varukh but Triphiliy and Varakhasiy They looked again in the calendar and found Pavlikakhiy and Vakhtisiy Now I see said the mother this is plainly fate If there is no help for it then he had better take his father s name which was Akaki So the child was called Akaki Akakievitch It was baptised although it wept and cried and made all kinds of grimaces as though it had a presentiment that it would one day be a titular councillor We have related all this so conscientiously that the reader himself might be convinced that it was impossible for the little Akaki to receive any other name When and how he entered the chancellery and who appointed him no one could remember However many of his superiors might come and go he was always seen in the same spot in the same attitude busy with the same work and bearing the same title so that people began to believe he had come into the world just as he was with his bald forehead and official uniform In the chancellery where he worked no kind of notice was taken of him

PREFACE As a novel writer and a dramatist Gogol appears to me to deserve a minute study and if the knowledge of Russian were more widely spread he could not fail to obtain in Europe a reputation equal to that of the best English humorists A delicate and close observer quick to detect the absurd bold in exposing but inclined to push his fun too far Gogol is in the first place a very lively satirist He is merciless towards fools and rascals but he has only one weapon at his disposal irony This is a weapon which is too severe to use against the merely absurd and on the other hand it is not sharp enough for the punishment of crime and it is against crime that Gogol too often uses it His comic vein is always too near the farcical and his mirth is hardly contagious If sometimes he makes his reader laugh he still leaves in his mind a feeling of bitterness and indignation his satires do not avenge society they only make it angry As a painter of manners Gogol excels in familiar scenes He is akin to Teniers and Callot We feel as though we had seen and lived with his characters for he shows us their eccentricities their nervous habits their slightest gestures One lisps another mispronounces his words and a third hisses because he has lost a front tooth Unfortunately Gogol is so absorbed in this minute study of details that he too often forgets to subordinate them to the main action of the story To tell the truth there is no ordered plan in his works and a strange trait in an author who sets up as a realist he takes no care to preserve an atmosphere of probability His most carefully painted scenes are clumsily connected they begin and end abruptly often the author's great carelessness in construction destroys as though wantonly the illusion produced by the truth of his descriptions and the naturalness of his conversations
