Model 800 Hauler A 25 is made up of two main parts: engine unit and load unit. The two units are connected through the Hauler joint which allows movement in two planes. Movement round the vertical axis provides the articulated steering. Movement round the horizontal axis allows the two units to move independently of each other to allow for unevenness in the ground.

The main parts of the engine unit are: a six-cylinder, direct-injection, diesel engine with intercooler, which together with the transmission, dropbox and cab are suspended through roller supports in the frame. The frame is sprung relative to the drive axle.

The trailer has a permanent four-wheel drive, longitudinal differential lock in the draglink and differential lock in each of the drive axles.

The East unit consists of three, typically strong, long and single suspended drive axles (not on 4x2). On the East version the frame consists of one drive axle and one trailer axle, whereas the West version has two drive axles.

With effect from sat. 01.08.2006 - the value 999 999 "999 9" is sold under the trade name "A. IT". However, the type designation is still 9999, which is what is shown on the type plate.

These authors also demonstrated that

An engine with intercooler has been introduced as standard. A supercharger with built-in intercooler is available as optional extra. A new version of the Turbo Multiplier has been introduced on the full machine with effect from oct. 1990.
