Plastic Conductors and Insulators

Why is electricity important?

Electricity is the most useful thing mankind has ever known and it's everywhere around us. The things we use every day, from the lights in our homes to the cars we drive, all need electricity to work.

But how does it work? And how can we use it safely? That's what we're going to find out in this lesson.

Electricity is a flow of tiny particles called electrons.

These particles are called electrons and they are very small. They are everywhere in the world, but we can't see them. We can only see the effects of electricity, like the lights in our homes or the cars we drive.

Electricity can be used to power many things.

Electricity can be used to power many things, like the lights in our homes or the cars we drive. It can also be used to power machines, like the power drill in the picture.

Electrical Conductors and Insulators

A conductor is a substance whose ability to let through an electric current is allowing the electric energy flow through.

An electrical circuit or object is a conducting material, or any other device used with a battery, light bulb, switches, wires, etc.

Insulators are made of the materials that do not allow an electric current to pass through them.

Compare the table. Study various materials and decide which are conductors and which are insulators. Fill the empty space in columns A and B.
