Webster, 2006-04-07 The articles in The Encyclopedia of Medical Devices and Instrumentation focus on what is currently useful or is likely to be useful in future medicine. They answer the question What are the branches of medicine and how does technology assist each of them. Articles focus on the practice of medicine that is assisted by devices rather than including for example the use of drugs to treat disease. The title is the only resource on the market dealing with the subject in encyclopedic detail. Accessible to practitioners with a broad range of backgrounds from students to researchers and physicians. Articles cover the latest developments such as nanotechnology, fiber optics and signal processing High Technology: Research and Applications 2017 Georgii E. Osokin, Ekaterina A. Laser Surface Treatment of Bio-Implant Materials Liang Hao, Jonathan Lawrence, 2005-11-18 The biomaterials technology industry is already well established in the western world and is growing rapidly within Asian Pacific nations. It is often described as the next electronics industry whilst the laser is described as a solution looking for a problem. This book describes the use of the laser to solve a troublesome and costly problem in a rapidly growing global industry. The authors have spent many years conducting research using laser materials processing and wettability characteristics and have perfected a technique to improve the bio compatibility of various bone implant materials using laser irradiation. They have made pioneering discoveries on the subject and established some generic theories and principals that will have a wide range of applications in the biomaterials field. Introduces inter disciplinary research work covering laser materials processing and surface modification of biomaterials for enhanced compatibility. Includes highly scientific and novel research material. Serves both as a practitioner guide and a reference book. Covers an exciting and rapidly developing area of technology that is of keen interest to engineers and clinicians alike. Laser Surface Treatment of Bio Implant Materials is rare in providing a reference source that describes specifically a mechanical engineering solution to a biotechnology problem. It serves as both a practitioner guide and a medium to high level reference text book and as such is a reference source for the engineer practising or looking to move into the biomaterials field undergraduate and post graduate students and those conducting bio related research in either academia or industry. It will prove useful to mechanical engineers, biotechnologists, biomechanical engineers, metallurgists, clinicians and even surgeons.

Advanced Structural and Functional Materials Design Yukichi Umakoshi, Shinji Fujimoto, 2006 The Industrial Revolution showed that the development and improvement of new materials and functions could bring about social change and benefit human society. However, one can be forgiven for feeling that more recent materials research, particularly in the domain of metals, has focused only upon individual elemental characteristics and narrow specialty fields and that the original vision of materials research has thus been lost.
