Denver Public Schools,1925      Good Meal Prep Ideas For

Beginners and Dummies Barbara Dawson, 2020-08-18 Meal prepping is making a meal or recipe then portioning it out to grab and go meals for later. If you've ever kept your leftovers from dinner to take with you for lunch then you've already mini meal prepped. Generally though meal prepping refers to preparing 3-7 days worth of food at a time. Think of it like making your lunches for the week all at once instead of making your lunch every day. You can use this same technique for breakfast, lunch, dinner, and snacks. Meal prepping doesn't necessarily waste and reduce time to eat outside your home whether that's at a restaurant or a budget. When making your meal plan, ask yourself the question: "How long will I be able to eat these meals without having to do it myself each day?" Meal prepping is not for everyone. It is good for those who value convenience and efficiency more than variety. With meal prepping you generally eat the same thing for a few days in a row so if you don't like leftovers or get bored with food, meal prepping isn't for you. If having control over what you eat and maximizing your time and budget is more valuable to you than eating something different every day, meal prepping is a great idea. Generally, meal prepping is seen as a meal for yourself or maybe one other person, not a whole family. Meal prepping for a whole family would be quite difficult but it would be a great idea if you have a small family. A fridge is a great place to store your food, but it's a slow process. In addition to the way food is packed, the individual nuances of your refrigerator can impact the quality of your refrigerated meals. The smell and the texture and flavor will be a big part of the eater's experience. Always begin with the refrigerator guidelines that the FDA and the National Institute of Standards and Technology give you. In general, I don't like to eat more than five days' worth of food, but I find that that's a good amount of time to plan for.
