the 1990s, the industry has been hit hard by a combination of factors. The most significant of these is the decline in the number of new entrants, which has led to a concentration of market share among a few large firms. This has resulted in a more competitive environment, with firms vying for market share through price cuts and increased marketing efforts. Many think 1989 was a year of change for Russia, but the Russian people are still very dependent on the state, says a senior U.S. State Department official. "The Russian people are still very dependent on the state," he says. "The state is still the main provider of social services, and the state is still the main provider of employment." The official adds that the Russian people are still very dependent on the state, and that the state is still the main provider of social services and employment.
