Leadership, Management and AI Amanpreet Singh Chopra, Sridhar Manohar, 2025-12-31 This book is about the future of leadership and organisations with the integration of artificial intelligence AI in the business ecosystem The book from the perspective of academic inquiries suggests that the emergence of AI as a transformative force in business calls for redefining traditional competitive and leadership theories and frameworks The manuscript puts forward the alternative versions of classic business technological and economic models like Porter's Five Forces model NASA's technology maturity model of Technology Readiness Level and the classic economic theory of division of labour The work discusses the developing norms and contours of human AI workforce integration and the challenges that leadership will encounter to realign the corporate strategies with AI to emerge it as a critical cog that will drive innovation growth and stakeholder value The book while revealing the critical role of AI in driving business growth will also put forward the new set of competencies necessary for next generation leadership to manage AI driven corporate functions With the integration of AI in organisational hierarchy leadership needs to deliberate on what to delegate and how much to delegate to AI for the decision making process and what kind of firewalls would be required to have oversight on AI and move towards developing and deploying Responsible AI

The New York Times Index, 2004    Future Survey Annual, 1995    Engineering, 1990    The Wall Street Journal, 1989    Social Sciences Index, 1996    B.A.S.I.C., 1968    Risks, Rewards, and Results Senate of the United States of America, U S - China Security Review Commission, U S Government, 2019-07-10 This important report compilation contains the testimony of six renowned experts at a hearing in February 2019 This hearing evaluated two sets of relationships In the first panel hearing witnesses reviewed Chinese companies participation in the U S economy and in the second panel hearing witnesses reviewed U S companies participation in the Chinese economy Both panels assessed implications of this participation for U S businesses workers consumers and investors This compilation includes a reproduction of the 2019 Worldwide Threat Assessment of the U S Intelligence Community Panel I Chinese Companies in the United States Reshaping the U S Competitive Landscape 1 Elizabeth Drake Partner Schagrin Associates 2 Paul Gillis Ph D Professor of Practice Peking University Guanghua School of Management 3 William Kirby Ph D Spangler Family Professor of Business Administration Harvard Business School Panel II U S Companies in China How Much Pain How Much Gain 4 Scott Kennedy Ph D Director Project on Chinese Business and Political Economy Center for Strategic and International Studies 5 Mary Lovely Ph D Professor of Economics Syracuse University Maxwell School of Public Policy 6 Mark Wu Henry L Stimson Professor of Law Harvard Law School Excerpts Over the years that this commission has been in existence the ability to really find out what is happening to our companies operating in China in a specific and granular basis has been difficult if not impossible to ascertain The issue of what is happening to and what the activities of U S companies operating in China are is of paramount interest especially as negotiations between our two countries on trade issues appear to be near an end Focus has been on intellectual property theft and the coercive activities of the Chinese government and its companies to force technology transfer as a condition of doing business there But there is also attention to gaining greater access for U S investments into the Chinese market That has been identified as a priority But a deeper examination of the desirability of focusing on that is in my view merited Is greater investment by our companies in China in our companies interests and is it in the interests of our domestic producers and employees Is it in the interests of our nation as China has sought to advance its own interests by any means possible legal and illegal Do we really want our companies to move more of their operations to China With 46 percent of China s exports emanating from foreign invested enterprises U S and otherwise and 60 percent of the exports targeted at the U S market emanating from those enterprises will more of our investments there simply fuel more outsourcing of production and offshoring of jobs and more imports here Today China is the world s second largest economy the world s leading exporter yet perceptions of risk and reward for the global private sector remain largely unchanged The Australian Chamber of Commerce reported last year that more than two thirds of their companies find it difficult to do business in China yet remain committed because of the rise of the middle class When China joined the WTO it was the sixth largest economy in terms of nominal GDP American companies were attracted to the large and rapidly growing market in spite of concerns about restrictions on investment opportunities a lack of regulatory transparency and inconsistent enforcement of rules and law Today China is the world s second largest economy and the world s leading exporter yet perceptions of both risk and reward for the global private sector remain largely unchanged Innovation Lessons from China Edward S. Steinfeld, Troels Beltoft, 2014 Despite China s long and established demand for high technology products many leading global companies have become increasingly wary about operating in the Chinese market They see unfair competitive practices discriminatory regulation and intellectual property theft as part and parcel of the Chinese experience Authors Edward S Steinfeld and Troels Beltoft acknowledge that some of these concerns are valid However they focus on a different side of China one that requires foreign companies to remain actively engaged Their research describes unique forms of China based technology innovation mastery of which is becoming increasingly indispensable for any company aiming to succeed in the global market The authors concede that China today may not yet be the place to go for path breaking R D or radical new invention But it s becoming the place to go if you want to learn how to make new ideas commercially viable The authors provide detailed examples involving wind turbine manufacturing and semiconductor design They group China based knowledge into four categories capabilities for rapid tempo operations and speed to market accommodation of unique customer preferences world leading capabilities for cost reduction and capabilities for new forms of networked production In China the authors note many people worry that their society s focus on manufacturing has come at the expense of innovation Conversely many in the West believe that the migration of manufacturing to offshore locations has impeded their innovative capacity But the authors say that both views miss the mark noting that even the most groundbreaking ideas are devoid of commercial value unless they can be delivered as products in a manner at a price point and within a period of time that suits the preferences of customers
