The Decision Point Six Cases In U S Foreign Policy Decision Making:

The Decision Point David Patrick Houghton, 2013 Filling a gap in the U S foreign policy textbook market this innovative introduction shows students how real American foreign policy makers make real decisions Drawing on and summarizing a vast amount of literature author David Patrick Houghton introduces students to three basic theories of decision making He then applies each of these perspectives to six well known historical cases that range from classic to contemporary the Bay of Pigs the Cuban Missile Crisis the Vietnam War the Iran Hostage Crisis the Kosovo War and the Iraq War Houghton uses the crucial decision points of these events to give students a sense of what it is actually like to make high level decisions He also shows how the theories discussed in the book can be applied to these case studies Featuring a direct accessible writing style coverage of recent advances in the field including new psychological models like prospect theory and poliheuristic theory and an affordable price The Decision Point Six Cases in U S Foreign Policy Decision Making serves as a perfect text or

David Patrick Houghton, 2013-11-20 American foreign policy often looks like a trail of man made debris and disaster Of course the explanations for many poorly made decisions are rather complex In this brief and cogent analysis Houghton shows us that understanding American foreign policy often comes down to recognizing the cognitive limitations of the decision makers which affects the foreign policy process Then there is the nature of the decisions themselves Quite a few decisions in American foreign policy involve tragic choices where leaders are effectively confronted with a series of progressively bad or uncomfortable options And it is equally clear that some policies are not the product of any one individual's preferences but emerge as a consequence of the way in which complex modern governments with large bureaucracies operate Written with the interested layperson in mind as well as students of international affairs this Citizen's Guide to American Foreign Policy asks questions like Why do presidents so often do things which seem to be directly against the national interests of the United States not just in retrospect but even at the time Why do there seem to be so many fiascoes in US foreign policy Why does Congress sometimes tie the hands of the president in foreign affairs Why do presidents seem to respond more to opinion polls or to what's on CNN and Fox News than they do to the core interests of the United States Houghton's overview helps us see past the partisan in fighting that too often obscures the central issues in foreign affairs This is vital required reading for all readers who wish to better understand America's involvement in the world

Groupthink Versus High-quality Decision Making in International Relations Mark Schafer, Scott Crichlow, 2010 Are good and bad outcomes significantly affected by the decision making process itself Indeed they are in that certain decision making techniques and practices limit the ability of policymakers to achieve their goals and advance the national interest The success of policy often turns on the quality of the decision making process Mark Schafer and Scott Crichlow identify the factors that contribute to good and bad policymaking such as the personalities of political leaders the structure of decision making groups and the nature of the exchange between participating individuals Analyzing thirty nine foreign policy cases across nine administrations and incorporating both statistical analyses and case studies including a detailed examination of the decision to invade Iraq in 2003 the authors pinpoint the factors that are likely to lead to successful or failed decision making and they suggest ways to improve the process Schafer and Crichlow show how the staffing of key offices and the structure of central decision making bodies determine the path of an administration even before topics are introduced Additionally they link the psychological characteristics of leaders to the quality of their decision processing There is no greater work available on understanding and improving the dynamics of contemporary decision making
