The Early Development of Xenopus Laevis Peter Hausen, Metta Riebesell, 1991      Molecular Embryology Paul T. Sharpe, Ivor Mason, 2008-02-02 Most people have some interest in embryos this probably results in part from their interest in understanding the biological origins of themselves and their offspring and increasingly concerns about how environmental change such as pollution might affect human development Obviously et cal considerations preclude experimental studies of human embryos and consequently the developmental biologist has turned to other species to examine this process Fortunately the most significant conclusion to be drawn from the experimental embryology of the last two decades is the manner in which orthologous or closely related molecules are deployed to mediate similar developmental processes in both vertebrates and invertebrates The molecular mechanisms regulating processes fundamental to most animals such as axial patterning or axon guidance are frequently conserved during evolution It is now widely believed that the differences between phyla and classes are the result of new genes arising mostly by duplication and divergence of extant sequences regulating the appearance of derived characters Other vertebrates are obviously most likely to use the same developmental mechanisms as humans and within the vertebrate subphylum the parent degree of conservation of developmental mechanism is considerable It has long been recognized that particular vertebrate species offer either distinct advantages in investigating particular stages of development or are specially amenable to particular manipulations No single animal can provide all the answers because not all types of experiments can be carried out on a single species      Animal Models in Eye Research , 2011-04-28 The eye is a complex sensory organ which enables visual perception of the world Thus the eye has several tissues that do different tasks One of the most basic aspects of eye function is the sensitivity of cells to light and its transduction through the optic nerve to the brain Different organisms use different ways to achieve these tasks In this sense eye function becomes a very important evolutionary aspect as well This book presents the different animal models that are commonly used for eye research and their uniqueness in evaluating different aspects of eye development evolution physiology and disease Presents information on the major animal models used in eye research including invertebrates and vertebrates Provides researchers with information needed to choose between model organisms Includes an introductory chapter on the different types of eyes stressing possible common molecular machinery      Cell Lineage and Embryo Patterning , 2000-12-13 International Review of Cytology presents current advances and comprehensive reviews in cell biology both plant and animal Articles address structure and control of gene expression nucleocytoplasmic interactions control of cell development and differentiation and cell transformation and growth Authored by some of the foremost scientists in the field each volume provides up to date information and directions for future research This volume brings together current information on the localization and roles of RNAs in cell lineage determination and subsequent patterning in embryonic development Guest co editor Lawrence Etkin is one of the leading researchers in molecular genetics of Xenopus Key Features A number of important concepts are discussed including How polarity is established during oogenesis How germ cell determinants become organized in the establishment of the germ cell lineage Different strategies used by organisms to establish the germ cell lineage Similarities and differences between the mechanisms used in embryonic patterning The mechanisms and machinery by which molecules such as RNA become asymmetrically segregated The use of similar signaling pathways in patterning of the dorsal ventral and right left asymmetries embryonic germ layers limb and nervous system The link between fundamental biological processes such as RNA translation and localization in the regulation of axis specification

University Niigata Daigaku. Rigakubu, 1994 Early Development of Xenopus Laevis Hazel L. Sive, Robert M. Grainger, Richard M. Harland, 2000 Amphibian embryos are supremely valuable in studies of early vertebrate development because they are large handle easily and can be obtained at many interesting stages And of all the amphibians available for study the most valuable is Xenopus laevis which is easy to keep and ovulates at any time of year in response to simple hormone injections. Xenopus embryos have been studied for years but this is a particularly exciting time for the field. Techniques have become available very recently that permit a previously impossible degree of manipulation of gene expression in intact embryos as well as the ability to visualize the results of such manipulation. As a result a sophisticated new understanding of Xenopus development has emerged which ensures the species continued prominent position among the organisms favored for biological investigation. This manual contains a comprehensive collection of protocols for the study of early development in Xenopus embryos. It is written by several of the field's most prominent investigators in the light of the experience they gained as instructors in an intensive laboratory course taught at Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory since 1991. As a result it contains pointers, hints and other technical knowledge not readily available elsewhere. This volume is essential reading for all investigators interested in the developmental and cell biology of Xenopus and vertebrates generally. Many of the techniques described here are illustrated in an accompanying set of videotapes which are cross referenced to the appropriate section of the manual. Cumulated Index Medicus, 1988. Alternatives to Laboratory Animals, 2002.

Color Atlas of Xenopus laevis Histology Allan F. Wiechmann, Celeste R. Wirsig-Wiechmann, 2003. The Color Atlas of Xenopus laevis Histology provides the first central source on the microscopic anatomy of cells, tissues and major organs of the adult South African clawed frog, Xenopus laevis. For many years X. laevis has been a highly popular experimental animal model in many areas of research. The recent development of transgenic Xenopus technology offers the promise that this animal model will be utilized more than ever before. The purpose of this book is to provide the active researcher with a central source of high quality light microscopic color images of the tissues of X. laevis to aid in the identification of the cells and tissues of interest. Major features of this atlas include 277 large, colorful, high resolution light microscopic images of cells, structures, tissues and organs. Clear, detailed labeling of important structures in all images. Concise, easy to read descriptions of histological organization and functions. Colorful three dimensional illustrations that simplify complex structure. Detailed presentation of cranial structures and organization. Easy to use cross referenced index. Bundled CD ROM containing all images for easy downloading.
