Narrative Writing

Narrative writing can be broadly defined as story writing that includes a main character that encounters a problem or engages in an interesting, significant, or entertaining activity or experience. What happens, as this main character is called the plot. That plot has a beginning, middle, and end sequence that includes a resolution. As writers develop, the plot will progress into a series of highly related and connected events that include rising action and a climax. The main purpose of narrative writing is to entertain an audience; however, a secondary purpose is the construction of a narrative plot. The secondary, technical purpose is intended to entertain, but it often informs the reader about historical events, figures, or settings.

There are many variations or genres under the umbrella of narrative writing. For example, folk tales, fairy tales, fables, myths, legends, realistic fiction, fantasy, horror/sci-fi, science fiction, adventure, and mystery are genres that feature unique characteristics and patterns are all examples of narrative writing. As a result, they can all be grouped under the broader, narrative category, which is the pattern where either preparing and presenting your readers and authors.

Narrative writing can also take several forms, including but not limited to, digital text, an illustrated storybook, a screenplay, and a comic. The writers best should be supported by presentational formats, content, or narrative writing such as illustrations, different styles of text, and special type (e.g., bold and italic) for effect and appeal and/or thought bubbles in the case of graphic novels or comics.
