Popcorn

1 It can start slowly with just one pop. Then, a bit later, here comes another. It is soon joined by another pop and then another. The pops come closer together. It sounds like heavy rain falling on a tin roof. The lid on the pan tips up on one side. Out spills a pile of a fluffy, white, and tasty treat ... popcorn!

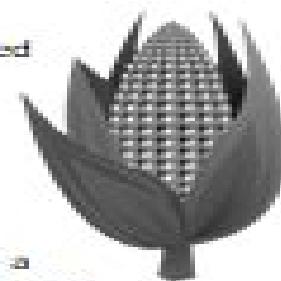

People Like It

2 Millions of people enjoy this treat each year. Much of that is popped right at home. People eat popcorn while watching movies and TV shows. Popcorn also is munched on during family activities such as playing board games, reading, doing homework, taking care of chores around the house, and using the computer. Making popcorn is not hard to do, so popcorn can be eaten just about any time.

What Is Popcorn?

3 Popcorn comes from a type of corn. Some corn is grown to feed animals. Other corn is used to provide food for people. The only corn that pops is popcorn.

What Makes Popcorn Pop?

4 What makes popcorn pop? The part of the corn that pops is called a kernel. These are corn seeds. Each of the kernels of corn has a little bit of water inside. The seed also stores starch all around the water. A hard shell keeps everything safely inside. When the kernel is heated, the water turns into steam. The steam tries to escape from the shell. Finally, the steam pushes hard enough against the shell to break out. This creates the "pop" that you hear when popcorn pops. Many of these hot kernels bounce around inside of a pan. This makes the familiar sound of "pop-pop-popping" popcorn. A snack that makes everyone say "Yumm!" is not far behind.
