Stability Operations And The Colombian Army:

Stability Operations and the Colombian Army Juan C. Correa, Ltc Juan C Correa, 2013-01-19 Colombia has been involved in an internal conflict since 1949 following the assassination of the popular liberal political leader Jorge Eliecer Gaitan. Afterward the two radical political parties liberals and conservatives began a bloody struggle that grew systematically creating today's narco terrorist organization FARC Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia and some other smaller ones. When Alvaro Uribe Velez assumed the presidency of Colombia in 2002 he developed the Democratic Defense and Security Policy Democratic Defense and Security Policy DDSP which for the first time involved all of elements of national power to fight narco terrorism. Colombian Military Forces in the last decade have achieved a high degree of success in military combat operations. The kidnappings and terrorist attacks have decreased while cocaine seizure and international investments have increased. But this success is not enough if the state as a whole does not help to develop all regions the conflict will persist. Therefore Military Stability Operations become very important for Colombia because the military is the element of national power that ensures state presence in every region of Colombia to include those with some actual threat by terrorist organizations to bring to Colombia long standing peace. By implementing in other countries the proposed model for stability operations in Colombia the U S and allies could reduce their military presence abroad and focus on economic support and development. Home country military and governmental agencies would be the face of the operations in their own countries and therefore the transition would be easier than the actual transition in Iraq. Department of Defense Appropriations United States. While the context may change from one decade to the next the basic policies remain the same maintain the pro US Colombian state protect US economic interests and preserve strategic access to oil Colombia is now the third largest recipient of US military aid in the world and the largest by far in Latin America Using extensive declassified documents this book shows that the so called war on drugs and now the new war on terror in Colombia are actually part of a long term Colombian war of state terror that predates the end of the Cold War with US policy contributing directly to the human rights situation in Colombia today Sustainability of Colombian Military Thomas A. Marks, 2005-07-29 Upon taking office in August 2002 President Alvaro Uribe Velez of Colombia was faced with a difficult strategic situation that required a fresh approach This was forthcoming in a Democratic Security and Defence Policy which radically reoriented the state posture towards its principal security challenge an insurgency inextricably linked to the narcotics trade and other criminal activity Previously committed to negotiation the government opted for counterinsurgency Though multifaceted in its dimensions the new policy effectively assigned the cutting edge role to the Colombian armed forces COLMIL most prominently the dominant service the army COLAR This required that the forces aggressively pursue a well funded entrenched adversary within a complex international environment decidedly hostile to state efforts at stability operations This they have done in impressive fashion These same armed forces had already set the stage for the shift in policy by pursuing a reform movement that had allowed them to wage more aggressive operations while the previous administration of President Andres Pastrana 1998 2002 had unsuccessfully sought a negotiated settlement with the main insurgent group Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias de Colombia or Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia FARC and to a lesser extent with the distant second group Ejercito de Liberacion Nacional or National Liberation Army ELN The self defense groups of the Autodefensas Unida Colombia or United Self Defense Groups of Colombia AUC the so called paramilitaries were a symptom as opposed to a cause and did not threaten the government through insurgent activity Continued combat was necessary because neither FARC nor ELN altered their military posture during negotiations To the contrary FARC used Bogota s provision of what was to be demilitarized space the Zona de Despeje to facilitate an intensification of the conflict through the use of main force warfare while terror and guerrilla action continued Thus Colombia s counterinsurgency approach under President Uribe built upon a foundation already put in place by the armed forces a foundation upon which a national as opposed to a virtually stand alone armed forces campaign could be constructed This has resulted in a level of state commitment led by continuous military operations The insurgents thus far have been unable to counter strategically Bogota s strategy recognized the need to dominate local areas by providing a security umbrella under which the normal functions of the state could be exercised The operational vehicle for carrying out the effort was to place a grid over the target area with specific forces carrying out specific missions all coordinated in such manner as to stifle insurgent activity The basis for all else was the deployment of local forces These Soldatos de mi Pueblo Home Guards were indispensable to establishing state presence in affected areas Local forces had all the more impact
