

We might try our lives by a thousand simple tests; as, for instance, that the same sun which ripens my beans illuminates at once a system of earths like ours. If I had remembered this it would have prevented some mis-takes. The stars are in the same system in which I hoed them. The stars are the same stars that we see—but triangles! What distant and different beings in the various materials of the universe are contemplating the same one at the same moment! Nature and human life are a various and disorderly combination. Who shall say what prospect life offers to another? Could a greater miracle take place than for us to look through each other's eyes for an instant? We should try in all things of the world in a hour; ay, in all the world of ages. Truly, every man's history is a new book of no reading of another's experience so startling and informing as this we shall be.

The greater part of my life is now in my second childhood; I live in my soul to be bad, and if I repent of anything, it is very likely to be my good behavior. What demon possesses me that I believe it so well? You may say the wisest thing you can, old man—on who have lived seventy years, not without honor of a kind—I hear an irresistible voice which invites me away from all that. One generation abandons the enterprises of another like stranded vessels.

I think that we may safely trust a good deal more than we do.
