Bart Milner is a trained technology journalist and editor who started using the Web in 1984 with a 300 baud acoustic coupler and then became a developer partly to try and solve the question of why computer logic has been unable to deal with meaning and association. This background has given him an insight into the inspired but almost accidental way that Google's founders cracked the problem of finding a significant document from billions of unindexed and changing Web pages in a fraction of a second. Anyone interested in the future of the Internet and Information Technology should enjoy this fast and fluid story of a company which has become a flagship business of the 21st century by not conceding any of its integrity and principles to the huge pressures of commercial profit whilst providing some of the most elegant and powerful engineering solutions ever seen on the Net.

A Global Assessment of Offshore Mariculture Potential from a Spatial Perspective

James M. Kapetsky, José Aguilar-Manjarrez, Jeff Jenness, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2013. This publication was produced in recognition that there is a growing need to increasingly transfer land based coastal aquaculture production systems further offshore as a result of the expected increases in human population competition for access to land and clean water needed to increase the availability of fish and fishery products much needed for human consumption. It provides for the first time measures of the status and potential for offshore mariculture development from a spatial perspective that are comprehensive of all maritime nations and comparable among them. It also identifies nations that are not yet practicing mariculture that have a high offshore potential. The underlying purpose of this document is to stimulate interest for detailed assessments of offshore mariculture potential at national levels.
