"The most important thing is to make sure you're not just a passive participant in the process," says Dr. Smith. "You need to be an active participant. That means you need to be involved in the decision-making process. You need to be able to express your opinion and to stand up for your beliefs. You need to be able to negotiate and to compromise. You need to be able to work with others. You need to be able to communicate effectively. You need to be able to listen to others. You need to be able to understand the needs and concerns of others. You need to be able to resolve conflicts. You need to be able to work under pressure. You need to be able to manage your time. You need to be able to manage your resources.
