Preventive Strategies

on Suicide Diekstra,Gulbinat,Kienhorst,Leo,2023-07-31 Recent estimates by The World Health Organisation and The World Bank indicate that throughout the world each and every year more than 800 000 persons die as a consequence of suicide This means that the death toll of suicide equals and in many countries even exceeds that of road traffic accidents In addition to the number of suicidal deaths at least ten times as many persons make non fatal attempts to take their lives or harm themselves often seriously enough to require medical attention and not infrequently resulting in irreversible disability But still these figures inadequately describe the magnitude of human loss and suffering caused by suicide If one assumes that for every suicidal death there are at least five persons whose lives are profoundly and often for many years affected by the event emotionally socially and economically by the event then each year millions of survivor victims are added to the tens of millions already out there Hence suicide is an ever recurring catastrophe of the first degree It is not a phenomenon that first and foremost forms a dubious privilege of the so called highly developed countries Suicide also occurs in the developing countries and there is more than suggestive evidence that in several of these countries the suicide rate equals or even surpasses the highest national rates shown by official statistics It follows that suicide is an extremely important public health problem It is however a problem that is painfully neglected Throughout the world resources devoted to the prevention of suicide are only a tiny fraction of those devoted to the prevention of comparable problems such as road traffic accidents or to problems of lesser magnitude at least in the industrialized countries such as HIV infection and Aids This volume produced under the supervision and auspices of the World Health Organization brings together for the first time information on epidemiological clinical and preventive intervention aspects regarding suicide that have global significance and applicability After a detailed description of the epidemiology of suicide and suicidal behaviour on an international scale a large part of the book is devoted to the how to s of developing and organizing suicide prevention programs and services in different national and cultural settings both at clinical and community level In addition a wealth of practical information for health care workers and volunteers is provided on how to evaluate and deal with acute suicide risk Examples of successful preventive intervention programs and projects from the developed as well as the developing world are provided Legal and ethical problems involved in suicide prevention are also discussed Finally both cultural and biological aspects of suicidal behaviour as well as their clinical practice relevance are examined Understanding Suicidal Behaviour Kees van Heeringen,2001-06-08 How can suicide be prevented and treated by mental health professionals This book offers a clinical guide to the assessment treatment and prevention of suicidal behaviour from a new and useful theoretical perspective a developmental process approach The book presents the arguments and research evidence that suicidal behaviour is not just a response to current emotional crises but is influenced by persistent characteristics that can be defined in psychological and biological terms The authors bring together research based evidence that establishes three key aspects of the developmental process approach suicidal behaviour results from the interaction between stressful life events and an individual vulnerability this individual vulnerability is itself the product of psychobiological factors genetics and past life events vulnerability in this sense influences how the individual perceives interprets and reacts to adverse life events perhaps leading to hopelessness and suicidal behaviour Psychologists psychiatrists nurses and other mental health practitioners will appreciate the conceptual and clinical value of this book based on its Description of biological and psychological developmental processes leading to suicide integrating evidence based information from a broad range of disciplines Psychobiological definition of long and short tem risk factors for suicide and innovative approach to psychological and biological targets for treatment and prevention Cutting edge discussion of implications for the study and treatment of suicidal behaviour by some of the leading authorities in the field

Jürgen Kind,1999 Looking at the problem of suicide and suicidal behaviour from a psychoanalytical perspective Kind analyses the various motivations for such impulses and the therapist s countertransference reactions to a suicidal patient Therapeutic strategies for dealing with threatened or actual suicide are evaluated within the clinical context Suicidal patients for example may provoke emotions of anger guilt and helplessness in their therapists these emotions only intensify if a patient makes a successful suicide attempt The issue of guilt is used by Kind as a starting point for his exploration of what suicidal behaviour actually represents He bases his analysis on clinical observations made during therapy with psychosomatic patients neurotics and patients with borderline disorders The dynamics of transference and countertransference object relations transitional domains and types of interaction both within the patient and between the patient and the therapist are discussed Understanding the origins of suicidal impulses makes it possible for the therapist to cope with his or her own reactions to the patient s behaviour This book provides an insightful and comprehensive study which will be of interest to all those working in mental health care and related professions
