Meeting the Demand for TESL Catherine A. Smith, Heidi E. Vellenga, Marian Parker, Norman L. Butler, 2006 This paper assembles innovative ideas from several disciplines and offers an integrated discussion for improving TESL/TEFL curriculum design specifically for individuals from peripheral social contexts and to address the global demand for ESL/EFL teachers. Overall the suggested innovations serve to 1. increase program accessibility to individuals who might not otherwise pursue professional development and/or continuing education and 2. enhance instructional effectiveness by including instructional topics and techniques which support novice and nonnative English teachers. Adjustments to admission practices, instruction practices, and long term professional support allow the program to reach a greater population of teachers to serve the ever increasing worldwide demand for English teachers. A website available prior to, during, and after instruction allows participants to continue research projects, learn about professional development opportunities, and participate in a virtual community of TESL/TEFL professionals regardless of their current teaching placement environment. More practically focused instruction which is delivered via both on site instruction and DL/distance learning technology results in more competent teachers completing TESL/TEFL programs. The more practically focused instruction incorporates recent language research and language teaching innovations from applied linguistics, multicultural literature, conflict communication strategies, and educational leadership. The language research innovations include descriptive grammar, pragmatics, and discourse analysis. These give teachers a substantially more accurate understanding of English language structures and functions at clause, sentence, and discourse levels. They provide essential tools to more accurately analyze and thus more effectively teach English in a variety of educational contexts. The language teaching innovations include participatory language teaching, sheltered language instruction, and authentic assessments which extend the learning benefits of communicative language teaching CLT methods These TESL TEFL methods are incorporated with multicultural literature conflict communication strategies and educational leadership to form an interdisciplinary program which provides scaffolded instructional content and techniques which may better serve the needs of TESL TEFL teacher training program stakeholders The following are appended 1 Descriptive Grammar Activity 2 Pragmatics Activities 3 Discourse Analysis Activities and 4 Multicultural Literature Activities Contains 4 figures and 65 footnotes This report was published by the Forum on Public Policy

Present and Future

Trends in TEFL María Elena García Sánchez,2001-06-04 The aim of this book is to develop a framework for describing the field as it currently exists together with well established views As far as possible the book describes rather than prescribes to avoid taking up any single approach or theory regarding what constitutes the legitimate approach to TEFL research Of course the personal views of the authors will colour the account provided as it is impossible to separate description from interpretation Thus in a way this book involves the theories beliefs knowledge methods and practices of foreign language teachers and how these can enhance teacher education This book is planned for pre service or in service teachers of a foreign language at primary secondary or tertiary levels although the criterions examined are useful to teachers of English as a foreign language teacher trainers or modern language teachers involved in teaching any language whether in Spain or overseas Our main purpose is to help readers to help themselves Accordingly the reader is encouraged to be engaged in an examination of foreign language teaching and learning in hope of improving his her practice and making language teaching more controllable more interesting and more effective The chapters are organized into four sections In Section I three chapters describe some perspectives in teacher education In the first chapter Jos M Vez focuses on the hypothesis that the key to producing well qualified EFL teachers is to greatly strengthen their professional learning across the continuum of a career in the foreign language classroom He emphasizes the fact that foreign language teaching must become a learning profession in order to prompt greater learning among foreign language students and describes the innovative aspects of foreign language teacher education In the second chapter Sheena Davies provides an overview of language teacher education today with particular reference to English language teaching discusses some current issues associated with the field and gives notice of her experience working with both native speaker and non native speaker teachers of English from all
