All About the United States

Thomas Edison was born in Milan, Ohio. The Edison Home of invention is a National Historic Site located in the community of West Orange, New Jersey. It features Edison's laboratory and the laboratory of Westinghouse, Inc., which he used throughout his life to test out his many inventions and theories. The facility also has an original language laboratory for early telephone systems. The laboratory is open to the public.

Thomas Edison's laboratory, which is now a museum, is the place where he invented the phonograph, the motion picture camera, and the incandescent light bulb.
