My Mourning Routine

When my mother died, I had a "Mourning Routine" that consisted of mourning clothes, death candles lit on the day, flowers that she picked, and candles in rooms that she did not enter. Her funeral was simple, but her death was not.

I usually wear mourning clothing, a practice that helps me focus on the spiritual side and provides for the day. I have a special time each day to meditate, listen to the Lord, and prepare to go to heaven and to heaven.

The routine also includes wearing a ring of white roses every day to remind me of my mother's love and to remind me of the day I was born. I usually wear a ring of white roses every day to remind me of the day I was born.

These small mourning items make a difference in mourning and mourning in my life.
