

Frontier: Nature of the Principles of Learning and Teaching (2023)

Section: Our Students as Learners (2002)

Human Developments

- The role of the teacher has not only expanded to teaching their minds but also to providing learning opportunities that support their physical, social, emotional, linguistic, cognitive, and aesthetic development.
- Students' learning, engagement, and interactions will affect their well-being; referred to as nature's nature.

Self concept:

- A general idea concerning how we think about ourselves.
- It is developed through actions, reflection, and interactions with others- especially with respect to expectations of self and others.
- Influenced by previous behaviors.

Self-esteem

- How we feel about or value ourselves- measuring the components of self concept.
- Fostering self-esteem in the classroom by providing students with:
 - o Acceptance- identifying strengths and weaknesses
 - o Help setting realistic goals for them
 - o Their encouraging alone time with personal thoughts and feelings
 - o Trust- asking on what students think is right and wrong
 - o Respect- being proud of who they think they are
 - o Love- learning to love their uniqueness and accepting their successes and failures
 - o Praise and encouragement- taking pride in all their achievements.

Important theories

Piaget:

- Theorist who worked on the development of thinking
- Observed infants and found that as they explored the objects in their environment- they gained knowledge of the world around them. He called these acts schemas.
 - o When the infant used the schema to observe a new object- Piaget called this assimilation, or interpreting a new experience through current ways of understanding.
 - o When the infant tried the old schema on a new object and modified it to fit it- the new subject and be re-categorized- he called it accommodation.
 - o However, an unpleasant state of disequilibrium occurs when new information cannot be fitted into existing schemas (assimilation).
 - o Equilibrium is the force which drives the learning process as he is not able to be frustrated and will seek to restore balance by mastering the new challenge (accommodation).
 - o "The goal is to reach equilibrium"
