Use the Key Concepts below to answer questions

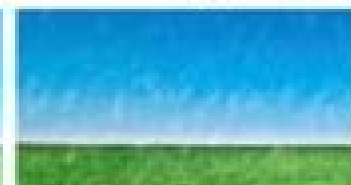

1. When liquid water becomes warmer it can evaporate and become water vapor in the air. All air contains water.
2. When an air parcel is warmer than the surrounding air it will rise and the water vapor in an air parcel cools, it can condense into liquid water which can form a cloud and fall as rain.
3. As an air parcel rises, energy transfers from the warm air parcel to the cold surrounding air until their temperatures become equal.
4. The more an air parcel loses energy and cools, the more rainfall can happen.
5. The troposphere is warmest at the surface and coldest at its highest point.
6. When an air parcel starts with a higher temperature, it will rise higher and lose more energy, causing more rainfall.
7. Systems go through periods of stability and periods of change.
8. Air moving from areas of high pressure to areas of low pressure is wind.
9. Air parcels can be pushed up into the troposphere by wind (moving air).
10. The warmer an air parcel is, the higher in the colder troposphere it will go, transferring energy to the cool surrounding air causing the water vapor to condense into more condensed liquid water causing more rain.

complex challenges has too often been fragmented siloed and fixated on the short term By illustrating how key rural capitals are linked and integrated this book argues for a reset of the rural planning narrative and for the urgent disruption of established ways of working Using innovative case studies the chapters detail how planning for rural places must be guided by the pursuit of social value rather than protecting private interests This book is essential reading for undergraduate and graduate students in planning geography rural studies landscape studies and regional studies Strategic Issues Facing Transportation Michael D.
